THE WORDS KANHUĪ AND KANHUĪ-RĀHASSIYA IN SOME CANONICAL JAINA TEXTS

Herman Tieken, Leiden

Abstract

Middle-Indic kaṇhuī is generally translated as an indefinite pronoun of place. A closer consideration of the instances of the word seem to suggest that it actually is an indefinite pronoun of time. It is noted, however, that, as shown by Sanskrit tatra, a pronoun of place might occasionally also be used as a pronoun of time. In practically all instances the word is part of the phrase na ... kaṇhuī. In addition, it is found in some kind of compound, namely kaṇhuī-rāhassiya, which seems to refer to people looking constantly (or everywhere) for a private place where they might have sex. Finally, it is suggested that kaṇhuī is most likely derived from Sanskrit karhicit.

The middle indic word kaṇhuī is rare. It is attested only in some canonical Jaina texts, to wit, Sūyagaḍa and Uttarajjhāya.¹ In the commentaries the word is glossed with kvacit, kutaścit and kuṭracit, that is, with indefinite pronouns of place. In at least one instance, though, there is a textual variant kayāi vi (note the double (v)i, Skt api), which assumes an underlying indefinite pronoun of time. Jacobi translates the word, which is mainly found at the end of a line and in conjunction with negative na, generally with “anywhere”, except in Sūya. 1.2.3.6 [148], where he translates it with “for some reason or other”. Schubring renders this instance with “somehow” (“irgendwie”). In the most recent translation of this sūtra, by Bollée, the word has been left untranslated, which is curious if only because Bollée is the only scholar so far who has dedicated a separate, though brief, study to kaṇhuī, in which he, moreover, opts explicitly for the interpretation of the word as an indefinite pronoun of place.² However, on closer consideration this very passage seems instead to argue in favour of the interpretation of kaṇhuī as an indefinite pronoun of time. The texts reads as follows:

1 The editions used are those of the Jaina-Āgama-Series: Sūyagaḍamgasuttam, edited by muni JAMBŪVIJAYA and muni DHARMACANDRAVIJAYA (Jaina-Āgama-Series, 2), Bombay 1978, Dasaveyāliyasuttam, Uttarajjhayaṇāim, Āvassayasuttam, edited by muni PUṆYAVIJAYA and paṇḍita Amṛtalāla Mohanalāla BHOJAKA (Jaina-Āgama-Series, 15), Bombay 1977.

2 BOLLÉE, 1983:111–112.

*evaṃ kāmesaṇaṃ vidū ajja sue payahejja saṃthavaṃ kāmi kāme ṇa kāmae laddhe vāvi aladdha kaṇhuī.*³

Bollée's German translation runs as follows:

So soll er, die Suche nach Sinnesgenüssen kennend, heute und morgen/künftig seine Bindung aufgeben. Wer noch im Bereich der Sinnesgelüste weilt, soll auf die Objekte seiner Wünsche verzichten, ob er sie (schon) erlangt oder (noch) nicht.⁴

As said, we seem to have to do with a clear case of kaṇhuī as an indefinite pronoun of time here:

A person who thus knows (what are the consequences of) chasing after sensual pleasures should give up (any form of) intimacy, today (or else) tomorrow. A person who is prey to sensual pleasures will never be satisfied, neither when he has gained such pleasures nor when he hasn't.

In the above translation ṇa and kaṇhuī are taken together. It should be noted that both Jacobi and Schubring take kaṇhuī and the negative particle ṇa separately, construing ṇa with the main verb and the pronoun kaṇhuī with the phrase laddhe vā vi aladdha. Thus, Jacobi translates:

So he who knows the pursuit of pleasures, must sooner or later give up their enjoyment (lest they drag him down). He who is still surrounded by pleasant things, should not love pleasures, whether he obtains them or for some reason or other does not obtain them;⁵

Schubring's translation runs as follows:

3 Note kaṇhuī with the dental instead of retroflex nasal and aladdha, which is unmarked for case. kaṇhuī has been passed over in ŚĪLĀNKĀCĀRYA's Sanskrit commentary (Ācārāṅgasūtram and Sūtrakṛtāṅgasūtram with the Nirukti of ācārya Bhadrabāhusvāmī and Commentary of Śīlāṅkācārya, edited by ācārya SĀGARĀNANDASŪRIJĪ Mahārāja and muni JAMBŪVIJAYAJĪ [Lālā Sundarlāl Jain Āgamagranthamālā, vol. I], Delhi 1978:48). The cūrṇi commentary has kaṇhui tti kvacid grāme vā pure vā (Sūyagaḍaṅgasutta [Part I] with Bhadrabāhu's Nirukti and Cūrṇi by Anonymous Writer, edited by muni PUṆYAVIJAYAJĪ [Prakrit Text Society Series, no. 19], Ahmedabad 1975:72).

4 BOLLÉE, 1988:72.

[E]benso möge, wer da weiß, wie das Begehren suchen heißt, [noch] heute [oder] morgen den Umgang [damit] aufgeben. Wenn man begehren möchte, soll man dem Begehren nicht nachgeben, mag es sich irgendwie erfüllt haben oder nicht.⁶

However, there is some evidence to suggest that we are indeed dealing with a phrase na ... kanhuī, which means that kanhuī is to be construed with the main verb of the sentence. This seems to be the case in Uttarajjhāya 1.7 [7] irrespective of the question as to whether we are dealing with a pronoun of place or of time:

*tamhā viṇayam esejjā sīlaṃ paḍilabhejjao buddhavutte niyāgaṭṭhī na nikkasijjai kanhuī.*⁷

Jacobi translates:

Therefore be eager for discipline, that you may acquire righteousness; a son of the wise, who desires liberation, will not be turned away from anywhere.⁸

The critical apparatus notes a variant, transmitted in a Prākṛit ṭīkā, kayāi vi. The interpretation of kanhuī as an indefinite pronoun of time makes indeed equally good sense:

Therefore one should eagerly develop discipline and obtain good conduct. [For] one who is looking for the right way [taught by] the “Buddha’s son” (read: buddhavuttaniyāgaṭṭhī) is never turned away.

In the two remaining instances of kanhuī in the Uttarajjhāya the situation is less clear. In any case in his translation of Uttarajjhāya 2.42 [90],

se nūna mae puvviṃ kammā’nāṇaphalā kaḍā jeṇāhaṃ nābhijāṇāmi puṭṭho kenai kanhuī,

6 SCHUBRING, 1926:135. Schubring quotes the cūrṇi (kanhui [t]ti kvacit) and ŚĪLĀNKĀCĀRYA (kaṇhaī kutracit), which latter quotation I have not been able to find in the edition of ŚĪLĀNKĀCĀRYA’s commentary, for which, see above, note 3.

7 paḍilabhejjao is probably to be divided into paḍilabhejja and o (= (t)u). For buddhapatte niyāgaṭṭhī there is a variant reading buddhaputtaniyāgaṭṭhī, which is probably to be preferred (see below).

8 JACOBI, 1973:2.

Jacobi disconnects kaṇhuī and ṇa and assumes a phrase puṭṭho keṇai kaṇhuī, “when questioned by somebody somewhere”:

Forsooth, in bygone times I have done actions productive of ignorance, for I do not remember them when asked by anybody anywhere.⁹

If we are indeed dealing with a phrase ṇa ... kaṇhuī, which is to be construed with the main verb, i.e. abhijāṇāmi, the interpretation of kaṇhuī as an pronoun of place hardly makes sense. The second line should instead be translated as follows:

For whenever someone questions me about [them, i.e. my former actions] I am not able to recollect them.

The sequence puṭṭho keṇai kaṇhuī is also found in Uttarajjhāya 1.2.48 [96]. However, in the latter instance puṭṭha does not seem to derive from pr̥ṣṭa “asked” but from spr̥ṣṭa “touched, attacked”:

ee parīsahā savve kāsavena paveiyā je bhikkhū na vihaṇṇejjā puṭṭho keṇai kaṇhu[ī], which Jacobi translates as follows:

All these troubles have been declared by the Kāśyapa. A monk should not be vanquished by them, when attacked by any anywhere.¹⁰

An alternative translation of the second line, in which ṇa ... kaṇhuī are taken together, would be:

A real monk is one who, when attacked by any [of them], remains untouched.

Whatever is exactly the case in the instances just quoted, kaṇhuī also occurs on its own without ṇa, namely in what seems to be some kind of compound, namely kaṇhuī-rāhassiya. The expression is found in Sūyagāḍa 2.2.706, a passage which occurs again in 2.7.861 (with kaṇhui with short i):

9 JACOBI, 1973:14 (verse 40).

10 JACOBI, 1973:15 (top of page).

Jacobi translates this passage as follows:

We now treat of the twelfth kind of committing sins, viz. through greed. Those (heretical monks) who live in woods, in huts, about villages, or practise some secret rites, are not well controlled, nor do they well abstain (from slaying) all sorts of living beings. They employ speech that is true and untrue at the same time: “do not beat me, beat others; do not abuse me, abuse others; do not capture me, capture others; do not torment me, torment others; do not deprive me of life, deprive others of life.” And thus they are given to sensual pleasures, desire them, are held captive by them, passionately love them for four or five years, for six or ten years – (the period) may be shorter or longer. After having enjoyed these pleasures, and having died at their allotted time, they will be born in some places inhabited by Asuras and evildoers. And when they are released therefrom, they will be born deaf and dumb, or blind, or dumb by birth. Thereby the bad Karman accrues to him. This is the twelfth kind of committing sins, viz. through greed.¹¹

Jacobi’s translation of kaṇhuī-rāhassiya is based on the commentaries.¹² Unfortunately he did not take into account the immediate context, which deals specifically with people who are itthikāmehiṃ mucchiyā, or “blinded by a passionate desire for women”. Accordingly, the word rāhassiya may be connected with rahas occurring in the phrase rahas upacāra in, for instance, Mahābhārata 3.279.21:

*tathaiva priyavādena naipuṇena śamena ca rahaścaivopacāreṇa bhartāraṃ paryatoṣayat,*¹³

11 JACOBI, 1973:363; see also p. 430.

12 Quoted by BOLLÉE, 1983:112 : kiṃcid rahasyam eṣāṃ bhavati yathā homaṃ mantrās ca āraṇyagaṃ vā ityādi. sarve devā eṣāṃ rahasyaṃ yenābrāhmaṇāya na dīyante, kārye maṇḍalapraveśadike rahasyaṃ yeṣāṃ te kvacid-rāhasikāh.

13 The Mahābhārata, edited by V.S. SUKTHANKAR et al., vol. 4, Poona 1942.

Likewise she [Sāvitṛī] contented her husband with her pleasant speech, dexterity, and even tenor, as well as her private ministrations.¹⁴

The phrase rahas upacāra, “private ministrations”, clearly refers to the sexual services Sāvitṛī renders to her husband Satyavān here.¹⁵ Similarly, kaṅhuī-rāhassiyā may refer to men who “are kaṅhuī seeking privacy (rahas) to have sex”. Admittedly, it is difficult to decide if kaṅhuī in the compound is an indefinite pronoun of time or place. If the enumeration āraṅṅiyā āvasahiyā gāmaṁṭiyā forms a unit with kaṅhuī-rāhassiyā only then the interpretation of kaṅhuī as a pronoun of place seems the more logical one: “those men who are seeking privacy to have sex wherever they are, that is, in a forest, a house [or] a village, who lack self-restraint [...]”. However, in the other case, namely when āraṅṅiyā āvasahiyā gāmaṁṭiyā anticipates not only kaṅhuīrahassiyā but what follows after that (no bahusaṁjayā ...) as well, kaṅhuī could be taken as a pronoun of time as well as of place: “those men, whether they live in forests, houses [or] villages, who are seeking privacy everywhere/who are constantly seeking privacy to have sex, who lack self-restraint [...]”).

In fact, when all is said and done in the case of kaṅhuī the attempt to make a distinction between an indefinite pronoun of time or place may well be too subtle, as it is in the case of, for instance, tatra, which, dependent on the context, may mean both “in that place” and “on that occasion”. Even so, originally kaṅhuī most probably was either the one or the other. In this connection the derivation of the word kaṅhuī might be considered. Bollée, who takes kaṅhuī as an indefinite pronoun of place, divides the word into kva and svid (Vedic kvá svid). While svid is supposed to account for hui, Bollée admits that he has no solution for the -ṅ-.¹⁶ By way of alternative I would in the first place like to draw attention to the fact that the use of kaṅhuī parallels that of Sanskrit karhicit, which is likewise invariably found at the end of a sentence and in collocation

14 VAN BUITENEN, 1981:766.

15 A similar expression (rahaḥ paricar-) is found in Mahābhārata 1.71. 24. In the available studies of the love story of Kaca and Devayānī, for instance, by M. Defourny and G. Dumézil, the implication of this expression have not been considered. Note, however, the word lalanā preceding it, which describes Devayānī as a temptress:

devayānyapi taṁ vipraṁ niyamavratacāriṇam anugāyamānā lalanā rahaḥ paryacarat tadā.

(The Mahābhārata, edited by V.S. SUKTHANKAR et al., vol. 1, Poona 1997 [reprint]).

16 BOLLÉE, 1983:112.

with the negative particle na. For examples of the phrase na ... karhicit I may refer to, e.g. Mānavadharmasāstra 2.97:

*vedās tyāgāśca yajñāśca niyamāśca tapāmsi ca na vipraduṣṭabhāvasya siddhiṃ gacchanti karhicit.*¹⁷

and Mahābhārata 14.21.15:

*tataḥ prāṇaḥ prādurabhūd vācam āpyāyayan punaḥ tasmād ucchvāsam āsādyā na vāg vadati karhicit.*¹⁸

If kaṇhuī is indeed the same word as the Sanskrit indefinite pronoun of time karhicit, we would be dealing with quite an irregular derivation. On the other hand, every syllable of kar-hi-cit has a correspondence in kaṇ-hu-ī. The really problematical part in the derivation is the development of rh to ṅh, which is otherwise completely unknown. In this connection it should be noted that the same combination is also found in the Middle Indic adverb of time eṅhiṃ “now”, in which case it is not accounted for either.¹⁹ It is not unlikely that specific usages of these words, for instance, to mark different degrees of emphasis or the use as a filler, have resulted in irregular sound developments. If, then, kaṇhuī is indeed derived from karhicit we should in the first place try to fit in the meaning “(n)ever”. What I hope to have made clear by the analysis presented here is that this is not a problem. In fact, in some cases this meaning might even be preferred. This does not rule out, however, that in certain contexts kaṇhuī might have been used in such a way that it can equally well be translated as a pronoun of time.

19 eṅhiṃ is mentioned but not explained by PISCHEL, 1900: § 144 and SCHWARZSCHILD, 1957:241–252. Incidentally, in connection with the -h(u)- in eṅhiṃ and kaṇhuī I would like to point to such Apabhramśa forms as taiyahum and taiyaho, pronouns of time followed by suffixes of the genitive plural (-hum/ho).
