Communication

INFORMATION FROM THE FIELD

Throughout 1988, coverage of ICRC field activities was provided in several ways: information delegates spent relatively long periods at various delegations; special reporting teams were sent to gather material for use at head-quarters to inform the public; meetings were organized with media representatives; and the media themselves showed considerable interest, mainly in large-scale ICRC field operations.

In 1988 the ICRC delegations in Ethiopia, Pakistan and Lebanon had one, sometimes two information delegates on their staff. These specialized delegates were responsible for receiving and briefing the many newspaper correspondents visiting the delegations and for producing articles for publication by the ICRC and the Movement.

The ICRC delegation in Israel and the occupied territories was visited in May by a team which brought back reports and photographs on the operation for publication in the ICRC Bulletin and in Red Cross/Red Crescent magazine.

In late December a team went to southern Sudan to take pictures and shoot film for the donors, the National Societies and the public. The mission also enabled the ICRC to satisfy the many requests of the international press, interested by the institution's activities in this conflict.

In August, ICRC spokesmen took part in the repatriation of Ethiopian and Somali prisoners of war and, in November, in the repatriation — unfortunately only partial — of Iraqi and Iranian prisoners of war. When ICRC delegate Peter Winkler was kidnapped in Lebanon a person was sent from Geneva to handle contact with the media.

Last but not least, special meetings were held with members of the press to enhance their knowledge and understanding of the essential rules of humanitarian law, the principles that govern ICRC work and ongoing activities. Two seminars were organized for African journalists (English- and French-speaking), one in London and the other in Paris. This type of dialogue is part of the ICRC's constant effort to develop its network of contacts with the media throughout the world.

INFORMATION FROM HEADQUARTERS

The public was kept regularly informed about the ICRC's day-to-day work, emergency operations and official stands on various issues. In addition to the monthly ICRC Bulletin, the media received about 40 press releases on the main events affecting the institution during the year. ICRC representatives gave many radio and television interviews. The kidnapping of Peter Winkler, his release and the temporary departure of ICRC delegates from Lebanon aroused particular interest in the international media.

The information offices of the National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies continued to receive a steady flow of information so that they could answer questions from their national media. Press kits containing articles, pictures and slides on ICRC and National Society activities in Ethiopia, South Africa, Somalia, El Salvador, Pakistan and South-East Asia were sent to the National Societies for their contacts with the press and for use in their publications. At the same time, over sixty news flashes of an operational nature were sent by telex on ICRC activities in "hot spots", as were various communications to the press.

In 1988, a number of National Society information officers were received at headquarters, thereby considerably strengthening ties between the ICRC and the National Societies.

Publications

Special events — To make its publications better known, in April the ICRC participated for the first time in the Paris Book Fair, displaying a wide selection of its Frenchlanguage publications. The French Red Cross was invited to help man the ICRC stand and contributed greatly to its success.

In May, for the second year running, the ICRC presented its recent publications to the many people who came to the Geneva Press and Book Fair. The public was very interested to see the ICRC in an unfamiliar role — that of publisher.

Generally speaking, the ICRC has increasingly tended to publish texts in languages other than English, French, Spanish and Arabic. A particular effort has been made to produce works in German, Italian, Portuguese, Russian and Chinese.

The list of publications hereunder includes only material published in Switzerland. ICRC delegations throughout the world also produced brochures and other written material locally.

In 1988, the ICRC issued the following publications:

- □ Russbach, Rémi: The International Committee of the Red Cross and health (English, French, Spanish and German) offprint from the Review.
- Resolutions of the Council of Delegates, Rio de Janeiro, 1987 (English, French and Spanish) — offprint from the Review.

- □ Statutes and Rules of Procedure of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement.
- ☐ The ICRC and the Independent Commission on International Humanitarian Issues.

In addition, the brochure The Central Tracing Agency of the ICRC is now also available in Russian and Chinese.

Radio programmes

The Red Cross Broadcasting Service (RCBS) continued to broadcast its twice-monthly shortwave programmes throughout the world in six languages: English, French, Spanish, German, Arabic and Portuguese. Omnidirectional broadcasts were transmitted on the ICRC frequency (7210 kHz), while programmes were beamed to Africa, the Middle East, Asia, North America and Latin America using air time made available by Swiss Radio International. In all, RCBS is on the air for about one hundred hours each year.

Every month RCBS received about 120 letters and listeners' reports from all over the world. More than 1,600 listeners, whose addresses are on computer file, regularly received new programme schedules. These schedules were also sent to the National Societies and to about 200 radio clubs worldwide so that they could mention them in their publications.

RCBS also participated in the annual conventions of the European DX Council and the Association of North American Radio Clubs, thereby maintaining contact with radio clubs and representatives of international radio stations broadcasting over short wave.

To reach an even wider audience, tapes of RCBS programmes were mailed each month to over 120 destinations: ICRC delegations, about 40 National Societies and a number of national networks and local radio stations for retransmission within their countries or regions. A monthly programme in Portuguese was sent to ten radio stations, and a broadcast in German was made every two weeks for a radio station in New York.

All RCBS programmes are produced at the ICRC studio in Geneva. They are broadcast free of charge thanks to the technical co-operation of the Swiss Postal and Telecommunications Administration and to Swiss Radio International, which transmits the programmes.

As in previous years, RCBS co-operated with the League in preparation for World Red Cross and Red Crescent Day on 8 May. The taped message for 8 May was sent to 128 National Societies and to the ICRC delegations.

Also for 8 May, a report on ICRC activities on the Khmer-Thai border was co-produced by Radio France International (RFI) and the ICRC. The programme went out over RFI wavelengths and was sent to RFI's 50 broadcasting partners. It was also made available to 37 National Societies.

Audiovisual activities

The Audiovisual Communication Division (DICA) continued to meet the many requests of ICRC departments and delegations, National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies and the media for audiovisual material. The material produced (16mm films, videos, photos, slides and graphic work) was used mainly to back up dissemination and operational information efforts.

The International Review of the Red Cross

At its meeting of 17 and 18 March 1988, the ICRC Assembly reaffirmed and specified the nature and objectives of the International Review of the Red Cross; it emphasized that the Review, the ICRC's official publication, was at the service of all the components of the Movement and was a faithful record of its guiding principles and activities vis-à-vis the outside world.

The ICRC, which bears overall responsibility for publication of the Review, wishes it to continue its development whilst maintaining a tradition of quality, true to the principles and ideals of the International Red Cross. This means voicing the concerns of members of the Movement, opening its pages more widely to humanitarian issues, covering a greater variety of subjects and encouraging the submission of articles by people from all over the world.

Another innovation illustrating the Review's policy of receptiveness and dissemination is that from May 1988 an Arabic version was published, to help spread knowledge of the message and activities of the Movement in Arabic-speaking circles.

In 1988 there were three special issues of the Review: "Internal disturbances and tensions" (January-February), "Development and co-operation within the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement" (May-June) and "Refugees and conflict situations" (July-August). In addition, several aspects of international humanitarian law, such as "The question of superior orders and the responsibility of Commanding Officers in Protocol I", "International humanitarian law and arms control" and "Underwater acoustic identification of hospital ships", were examined, as were the notion of human rights as perceived by the founders of the Red Cross, basic health care, etc. The Review also printed a previously unpublished account of a soldier who had taken part in the 1859 Italian campaign.

The Review highlighted current events in its summaries of ICRC life in Geneva and the activities of its delegations throughout the world.

On the occasion of the 125th anniversary of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, the Review published the reflections and memories of well-known people in and outside the Movement. It covered the main events marking the commemoration, in particular the Seminar on Information and Dissemination of International Humanitarian Law as a Contribution to Peace, held in Leningrad, the inauguration of the International Museum of the Red Cross and Red Crescent in Geneva and the Scientific Symposium on the Precursors of the Red Cross, which took place in Geneva in October.

The Review continued to chronicle the main activities of the Movement, reporting on statutory meetings and international or regional seminars organized in 1988 across the globe (especially those on dissemination of international humanitarian law organized by the ICRC, the League and the National Societies). It also covered events organized by other humanitarian organizations, such as the International Institute of Humanitarian Law in San Remo.

The Review announced the recognition by the ICRC of new National Societies and ratifications or accessions to the Protocols additional to the Geneva Conventions. It also published about a dozen reviews of books on humanitarian law or humanitarian issues.

Visits to the ICRC

In 1988, a total of 7,221 people (members of National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, diplomats, officers and students from nursing, vocational and secondary schools) visited ICRC headquarters in Geneva, either in groups or individually. They were given talks on ICRC activities, illustrated by films. Visits were also organized to the Central Tracing Agency.
