and one of its officials put the girls up for the night.

The next day, the Embassy received letters from outraged members of the British public with messages of sympathy and money for the girls. Thanks to the generosity of the public, they had enough money to complete their journey and perhaps had a more favourable picture of the British!

KRAMGASSE

Shop windows in the Kramgasse in Berne will bear witness to the life of the Swiss abroad during the weeks before the 50th Assembly of Swiss Abroad next August. The Swiss of the North, under the guidance and inspiration of Prof. J. P. Inebnit, are putting up a tremendous contribution. They are exhibiting a huge, true-to-life model of the town of Hebden Bridge, the hills above the Calder Valley (Hardcastle Craggs), a real mountain stream activated by a pump, and, first and foremost, a gathering of Swiss attending their annual Landsgemeinde under the leadership of Prof. Inebnit.

This ambitious scheme is being carried out by the school children of Hebden Bridge. Prof. Inebnit has secured the full co-operation of Mr. David Fletcher, a Hebden Bridge Urban Councillor who has played a dominant role in staging the annual Swiss Weeks of this Lancashire town. Two years ago, he organised, in co-operation with Prof. Inebnit, an exhibition of paintings on the theme "Switzerland" in the Hebden Bridge Town Hall and later (if my memory is correct) at Chateau'd'Oex.

The planned size of the Hebden Bridge model was 2½ metres deep and 4 metres wide. A hitch has cropped up because the jewellery shop in the Kramgasse where the model is due to be exhibited has notified its promoters that it could only be 1.45 metres deep. This would require eliminating much of the moors above Hebden Bridge and probably the torrent. Prof. Inebnit, who was in Switzerland for a trial at Bienne in which he was to defend a conscientious objector, went to Berne to see how things were going.

Who pays for all this? There are fortunately limited material expenses. Cardboard, clay, glass fibre and cotton wool are not particularly costly hardware. Prof. Inebnit was sufficiently devoted to the project to give Mr. David Fletcher personal financial support to get the whole thing started. The greatest problem will be to get the model to Switzerland. I understand that it is built of one single piece and that negotiations are under way to obtain Swissair's co-operation.

APRIL 1972

During our holiday to Switzerland, we travelled 1,682 miles. The car behaved very well, we had no troubles of any kind. During that week we came across all kinds of weather, from wintry conditions with heavy snow storms and sharp frost in Switzerland, to heavy rain on our way through France.

We went for an outing to the Schilthorn. On that day the weather was perfect, clear with brilliant sunshine. Words would be impossible to find to describe our impressions in face of the scenery unrolling everywhere before us. This was nature in all its glory and magnificence. As far as the eyes could see, peak after peak, immaculate, reaching to the blue sky, inundated by a brilliant sunshine. Down in the valley, cotton wool-like clouds were floating, following the fantasy of the wind, sometimes rising, sometimes falling, in a variety of shapes, as if playing with the wind.

Except for the occasional noise of the cable car, the stillness was only broken by the cry of the choucass, one could not help wondering what those birds were doing in this land of snow and ice, and what they live on. A few daring skiers were practising their favourite sport and soon disappeared down the steep slopes in the fog which was gradually rising from the valley. We made the most of the sunshine while it lasted, sitting lazily on the restaurant's platform, feeling the heat of the sun, despite the fact that the temperature was well below freezing. We were glad to have our dark glasses without which it would have been impossible to enjoy this wonderful and unique panorama.

However, the clouds were still rising. By 3 p.m. we were engulfed in them. A thick fog spread over everything. It was time to go. From the land of snow and ice, we were in no time in the green valley again. In less than an hour, from the solitude of the Alps, to the noise of civilisation.

Soon we were in Interlaken admiring the grandiose Yungfrau, spotlessly white, rising to the blue cloudless sky, unaffected by man's problems and restlessness, witness to countless generations of our species, confident in surviving the agitation and boasting of the present Master of the earth. In face of such grandeur, man feels small, insignificant, almost a parasite in God's creation, but thankful to his Maker for giving him the possibility to enjoy His work in His creation, and to share in its glory.

CORRECTION

We apologise for two false statements that appeared in our report on Colony life in our 12th May issue. In our report on the Nouvelle Société Helvétique's Annual Dinner, we quoted the President as saying that we should not call the Ambassador, who was present at this function, by the title "His Excellency". This was by no means what the President had intended to say. Recording the animated events of the City Swiss Club AGM, we erroneously named the spontaneous donor of a £50 cheque to the club as Mr. P. Gut. In fact, the benefactor was another member, who modestly wishes to remain unnamed.
