Lettera ai cittadini di Gibilterra

Nel marzo 2014 ho fatto il mio primo viaggio di ricerca a Gibilterra come artista, per preparare una mostra che dovrò svolgere sul territorio.

Conoscendo la storia di Gibilterra, ho deciso di affrontare il delicato tema dell'evacuazione durante la Seconda guerra mondiale.

Non vorrei però affrontare la questione sotto un profilo strettamente storico o politico, ma recuperare le tracce di una memoria visiva condivisa.

Queste tracce, per me, sono rappresentate dalla visione delle «lenzuola» che tutte le donne e le loro famiglie evacuate hanno dovuto abbandonare nelle proprie case.

Con queste poche righe vorrei chiedere a ogni famiglia che ha avuto un legame con l'evacuazione, che segnò la storia di Gibilterra e soprattutto la loro storia, di partecipare con un'azione: donare un proprio lenzuolo di oggi, un segno della quotidianità, in ricordo di una vicenda che è nella memoria di molti dei residenti.

Questi preziosi doni personali, che sono parte della vostra intimità, verranno utilizzati per la realizzazione di quest'opera d'arte a cui, in questo modo, tanti di voi prenderanno parte.

«In a low voice» è il titolo di quest'opera, perché è la voce che prende importanza e la storia può farsi largo quando tante singole persone parlano sommessamente e dal proprio intimo.

Chi fosse interessato è invitato a consegnare il proprio «lenzuolo» allo spazio Fine Arts Gallery in Casemates di Gino Sanguinetti. Siamo aperti dalle 10 alle 14 e dalle 15 alle 18 dal lunedì al venerdì.

Vi ringrazio anticipatamente della vostra collaborazione.

I thank you all, Miki Tallone

Letter to the citizens of Gibraltar

In March 2014 I travelled to Gibraltar for the first time as an artist, in order to prepare for an exhibition I am planning to hold here.

Knowing the history of Gibraltar, I have decided to tackle the delicate matter of the evacuation during the Second World War.

However, I don't want to tackle this subject in strictly historical or political terms, but to recover traces of a shared visual memory.

For me, these traces are represented by the vision of the "sheets" that all the evacuated women and their families had to leave behind in their homes.

I am writing this brief letter to ask all the families who have links with the evacuation, which left its mark on the history of Gibraltar and, above all, on their own history, to take part by donating one of their sheets from today, as a symbol of everyday life, to commemorate an event that lives on in the memories of many of the residents.

These precious personal gifts, which are part of your private lives, will be used to create this work of art in which many of you will therefore be taking part.

The work is called "In a Low Voice", because the voice is what is important and stories can make themselves heard when lots of individual people talk in a low, intimate voice.

All those interested are invited to deliver their "sheet" to Gino Sanguinetti's Fine Arts Gallery in Casemates by 15 May 2014. We are open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday to Friday.

Thank you in advance for your invaluable assistance.
