Adventurers, idealists, merchants and others of Swiss extraction played a part in colonial history. In this book Hans W. Debrunner, an acknowledged Africa expert records in detail the widely differing stories of 14 people, such as a slave trader, a farmer's wife, a soldier of the French Foreign Legion, a minister in the Ethiopian government, a cotton dealer and a globetrotter.

With this book Debrunner makes a valuable contribution to the history of Swiss emigration.

Talking to each other

This book endeavours to draw attention to the increasing isolation, inability to communicate and growing polarisation in dialogue. The author makes the point that without constant readiness to talk to each other, living together in a democratic state is jeopardised. Robert Schnyder's book contains a card game with novel suits (head, heart, eye and hand) intended to arouse interest in and awareness of the rules of dialogue.

Folk music to treasure

To mark the 80th birthday of the Swiss accordion virtuoso Rees Gwerder - the Grand Old Man of Central Swiss and Muota Valley folk music - original digital recordings were made at Rees' homestead on the Artherberg (Canton Schwyz). In this way the unadulterated atmosphere of Rees' natural style of playing is particularly brought out.

The second record, also produced by the digital process is devoted to the "Zäuerli", the Appenzell natural yodel. The recordings were made on "Old New Year's Eve" (13 January) in Urnäsch, Appenzell Outer Rhodes. The mystic, melancholy strains of the "Zäuerli" create a moving, solemn mood and fascination.

Obtainable from: CSR Records Zurich, Dienerstrasse 62, CH-8004 Zurich, Tel. 411 241 58 70; fax 411 291 25 28.

Death of Edgar Bonjour

The well-known Swiss historian, Edgar Bonjour, has died in Basle at the age of 92. One of his chief claims to fame is his work on the history of Swiss neutrality. At the behest of the Federal Council he wrote the "Bonjour Report" which examined government foreign policy during the Second World War.

He grew up in Berne where – after studying at Berne, Geneva, Paris and Berlin universities – he taught at the city's Grammar School and from 1932 was Deputy Director of the Federal Archives. In 1935 he became Professor of Swiss History and Modern General History at Basle University, of which he was Rector in 1946.

After retirement in 1968, Professor Bonjour continued to give lectures for many years. As recently as the Gulf war he gave a long interview in which he discussed current problems of Swiss neutrality.

Switch to Private Industry

Ambassador David de Pury, leader of the Swiss delegation to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), left the Federal Department of Political Economy at the end of April to take over the position vacated by Fritz Leutwiler as Chairman of the Board of Brown Boveri Ltd. (BBC). As from 1992 he will also be Co-President of the multinational group Asea Brown Boveri (ABB).

Contrary to rumours that tensions within the Department and the Federal Office for Foreign Trade had been the reason for his resignation, the top-ranking diplomat explained that he was parting from his two superiors, Federal Councillor Jean-Pascal Delamuraz and Secretary of State Franz Blankart on the best of terms. Indeed the Federal office for Foreign Trade has already acted as a springboard for many a diplomat wishing to take up senior positions in private industry. The successful commercial diplomat, whose task as "Mr Gatt" was certainly not an easy one, in particular with regards to Swiss agriculture, is taking a brave leap into the presidency of an international corporation. Asked about his suitability for this new job, de Pury replied that he was bringing a lot with him but that he still had much to learn.

Four Swiss in UN service

The Berne Professor of International Law, Walter, Kälin has been appointed by the UN to investigate the human rights situation in Kuwait during the Iraqi occupation. Aged 40, Professor Kälin is regarded as a specialist in the field of the protection of human rights. He will submit his first report before the end of this year.

Professor Kälin's appointment brings to four the number of Swiss currently working for the UN. Joseph Voyame has been dealing with the human rights situation in Romania since 1989 and also presides over the UN Committee Against Torture.

In addition, at diplomatic level, as special emissaries of the UN Secretary-General, Ambassador Edouard Brunner and Ambassador Johannes Manz have been appointed to help in bringing peace to the Middle East and Western Sahara respectively.

An alternative to boarding schools

The Val-de-Travers, in the canton of Neuchâtel, boasts a grammar school which places its main emphasis on modern languages (type D of the Swiss matriculation examination with German, English and Italian as foreign languages). Up until now, pupils attending this grammar school in Fleurier have come solely from the small towns and villages in the Val-de-Travers region. This catchment area with its 12,000 inhabitants enjoys a well-developed infrastructure offering a small theatre, a cinema, concerts, an ice skating rink, tennis courts, a discotheque etc. as well as good train connections to Neuchâtel. But with 'mobility' of grammar school pupils and students a very popular topic of discussion these days, the authorities at Fleurier Grammar School feel it is important to make a very valid contribution to mobility by opening its doors to the outside world.

This offer is particularly directed towards the children of French-speaking Swiss families living abroad (members of the diplomatic service or foreign aid organisations, senior management in industry, missionaries, etc.) who are seeking a grammar school education to qualify them for entry to Swiss universities. As a part of this concept, the young people are not to be accommodated at the school, but will live with selected families from the area. The all-in price, which covers all costs (school fees, board and lodging etc). except pocket money, amounts to Sfr. 15,000 per year. Further information may be obtained by contacting the following address: "Projets familles d'accueil", Gymnase du Val-de-Travers, Place Longereuse, 2114 Fleurier, Switzerland.

Jean Tinguely dies

At the end of August, the world-famous Fribourg artist, Jean Tinguely, died of a stroke in Berne at the age of 66. With his "articulated pictures" and particularly the machine sculptures constantly ticking over which he devised from scrap iron, Tinguely has had a sustained influence on the artistic scene since the early 1950s.

In its next number the Swiss Review will include a comprehensive feature on the life and work of this great artist.
