A Swiss "Sngerfest" Unites 375 Singers and Yodelers

One of the most stately opera Houses in the American West, the Seattle Opera House, opened its curtains Friday night, June 28, with the dazzling sight of 375 singers and yodelers and performers on the flood-lit stage, all in colorful Swiss costumes. The 2½ hour grand concert was given by choruses from four Western states and two Canadian provinces.

It was part of a four-day festival organized by the Mnnerchor "Edelweiss" of Tacoma, Washington. The United Swiss Singing Societies of the Pacific Coast, embracing 11 choruses, have sponsored 22 such festivals since the first was held in 1934. They bring together participants from throughout the United States, Canada and other countries. A special attraction this year were 20 yodelers from the Jodelklub Baden in Switzerland.

With nearly 80 Swiss songs, 70 yodel and instrumental numbers and folklore being offered, one could not help to be proud that here in the distant West, so far away from Switzerland, the Swiss heritage is being preserved so successfully. A high-ranking official in the Swiss consular service here commented that such festivities are another example that Swiss associations in the United States have often been more successful in carrying on Swiss traditions than the "Swiss back home".

It took a veritable small army of Swiss and Swiss-American volunteers to make the festival so successful. The lion's share of the credit goes to festival president Joe Hospenthal (a native of Canton Schwyz), his wife Louise, the members of the 13 festival committees, and conductor John Biehl, the festival music director. There were more than 30 major events to be cared for by the stouthearted men and women of the sponsoring Tacoma societies, the Mnnerchor "Edelweiss" and the Enzian Swiss Ladies Choir. The nearly 400 singers in the 11 singing societies had rehearsed diligently during the past two years, coached by their music directors and accompanists.

The focal point of the activities was the Swiss Park of the Swiss Sportsmen's Club of Tacoma, a 32 acre estate now in its 49th year. With a spacious club house and other elaborate facilities, and in a beautiful park-like setting, it is easily one of the most attractive and best equipped Swiss Parks in the country. Swiss immigration into the Tacoma region began 115 years ago; the Swiss Society of Tacoma has done its charitable and social and patriotic work for 107 years. Still today there are more than 15 Swiss organizations active in the Tacoma country.

The Swiss astronaut Claude Nicollier will be in San Francisco early in 1997 and will speak about his last mission in space. Details about this very special event, organized by the San Francisco Chapter of the Swiss American Chamber of Commerce (SACC), will not be available before December.

Members of the Swiss Associations (SACC, Scientific Community, Swiss Clubs) will be directly informed in due time. Information for non members will be available by calling the voice mail system of the Consulate General of Switzerland as from December 1996: 415-788 2272, extension 107.

These four days of nostalgia, patriotism, appreciation of our Swiss heritage, and cordial cameraderie with countless friends, will long be remembered and cherished. The festival was a wonderful testimony that among the Swiss and their descendants in the American West our Swiss traditions and the patriotic love for Switzerland are still very much alive.

Bamert Conducts Mozart at the Hollywood Bowl

On July 18, local Swiss-Americans flocked to the Hollywood Bowl for a picnic and a Mozart concert under the stars, with guests conductor Matthias Bamert, director of the International Music Festivals of Lucerne and of London's Mozart Players.

This was the sixth annual celebration of "Swiss Night at the Hollywood Bowl", a tradition that began in 1991 when, under the auspices of the Consulate General of Switzerland, Swiss conductor Peter Maag performed in honor of Switzerland's 700th anniversary.

The evening's program featured masterful performances including Eine kleine Nachtmusik and the Piano Concerto No. 12 (K414), with Japanese soloist Mari Kodama. Ms. Kodama, who studied at the Conservatoire national superieur de musique in Paris, and has performed in concert halls around the world, gave an assured, individualistic, and contemporary rendition of the concerto. The Serenata Noturna and Symphony No. 40 in G minor rounded out this fine concert.

Swiss-born Matthias Bamert began his conducting career as apprentice to George Szell and as assistant conductor to Leopold Stokowski. He has worked with many major orchestras around the globe, and has served as resident conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra, music director of the Swiss Radio Orchestra in Basel, principal guest conductor of the Scottish National Orchestra, and director of the contemporary festival of Music Nova in Glasgow.

Mr. Bamert, who has lived in London since 1987, is a respected interpreter of the romantic repertoire, as well as a champion of contemporary music. His own compositions have been performed and recorded by major American and European orchestras, and he has conducted world premiers of works by contemporary composers including Takemitsu, Denisov, Holliger, Erb, Huber and others. He appeared in an innovative Swiss-produced television series on alternative presentation of classical music, which has been broadcast around the world.

This year's concert was held under the auspices of the Consulate General in Los Angeles, with media sponsorship from the classical radio station KKGO-FM. Our thanks go to everyone who made this wonderful evening possible.

A Documentary

"Just like Frick and Frack"

You probably have heard the phrase, "...just like Frick and Frack", or even used it yourself. Have you ever wondered where it came from?

pantomime plus the rubber legs of Leon Errol variety, they soon became the outstanding comedy skating sensation of the United States and Canada. They brought an entirely new comedy technique to the figure skating world. Their specialty, the hilarious cantilever spread-eagle, a gravity blade stunt, was one of the most amazing tricks in the history of figure skating.

Both started amateur figure skating at the age of seven in a small town in Switzerland. Instead of competing in the 1936 Olympics as they were scheduled to do, they decided it was more fun to satirize the traditional skating, amusing the people around the Swiss rinks. They soon Frick and Frack, the two Swiss comedians on skates.

This documentary is an homage to Frick and Frack, two comedians on skates, who, in the forties and fifties, enchanted audiences by the thousands in North America. They were to the ice shows what Laurel and Hardy were to film. Two eccentric young men from Switzerland, with their immense gift of fantastic imagery, coupled with a Charlie Chaplin sense of left their studies in architecture and business and went on a professional tour in Great Britain, which was climaxed by a command performance in London in 1938. Shipstad and Johnson signed them as members of the Ice Follies a year later.

Frack's career ended tragically in 1954. He came down with a crippling bone disease, which prevented him from ever skating again. Frick was Frackless! This meant the end of an era, and of a world famous comedy team. Frick continued his career, for many years, as Mr. Frick, solo. He is retired now and lives in Palm Springs. Frack died in 1979. He was my uncle.

This documentary is about their days of glory, tragedy, and the timelessness of laughter. It is told through archival footage (performance and "This Is Your Life" 1964 TV show), interviews with Frick and his contemporaries, interspersed with anecdotes, jokes, and re-enactments, supported with photographs, posters, scrapbooks, references to two feature films by Monogram Picture Corp., featuring Frick and Frack in "Silverskates" and "Lady Let's Dance."

Auswandererschicksale

B.J. In der «Berner Zeitschrift für Geschichte und Heimatkunde» hat 1988 Peter Hurni als studierter Historiker die Auswanderung von Bernern nach Übersee im 19. Jahrhundert kenntnisreich geschildert und mit Dokumenten belegt.

Ähnliches unternimmt nun für Glarus der Jurist und Journalist Walter Hauser. War ursprünglich an eine Festschrift zum 150jährigen Bestehen von New Glarus in Amerika gedacht worden, so weitete sich das Werk allmählich zu einem Überblick über Armut und soziale Nöte im Tal der Linth beim Beginn der Industrialisierung, zur Darstellung von gesellschaftlichem und politischem Filz und zur Entlarvung der Praktiken von Gemeinden, welche Mittellose in andere Erdteile absoben, um sich Armenlasten zu ersparen. Oft litten die Emigranten bereits auf dem Weg zum Abfahrtschiff – meist Le Havre – schwere Not und wurden von Reiseagenten hemmungslos ausgenutzt. In Amerika selber gelang es nur wenigen, zu Wohlstand und wirtschaftlicher Sicherheit aufzusteigen. So ist ein packendes Gemälde der Zeit vor rund 150 Jahren entstanden, das nicht nur für Glarner Interessantes zeigt.

A historical novel in "Bärndütsch"

"Niklaus und Anna"

Time runs away when you read this book. There is nothing boring in. It's a living picture of common people at the beginning of the 19th century.

It was the time when Napoleon I conquered Europe and Switzerland with it. Niklaus Marti, the hero of the novel lived then. He was the author's ancestor, strictly speaking his grandfather's grandfather. Werner Marti, the author, searched a long time for source material concerning Niklaus' past and his surroundings and he found a lot. The novel is based on those facts.

Niklaus Marti was the son of a mason. He was resident in Vogelsang, a hamlet in the Bernese countryside called "Seeland". The novel presents his view of a new age: the "ancien régime" (the aristocratic government) has to resign, the native people are oppressed by French invaders and Bern's government prosecutes members of a sect with severity.

There are three women all of them named Anna (plus a girl named Anja in Poland) who are fond in the biography of Niklaus. Niklaus is forced to follow Napoleon I with his army as a mercenary. He manages to escape and he returns back home.

Rudolf von Tavel (1866–1934) the famous Bernese writer wrote historical novels in Bernese German 70 years ago and Werner Marti has done the same now. His novel was awarded with the "Buchpreis des Kantons Bern" (i.e. prize – donated by the Kanton Bern) in 1995.

In my opinion it's an impressive novel. And don't be timid. Reading "Bärndütsch" (Bernese German) is easier than you think, of course.

Switzerland's One and Only China Manufacturer

Switzerland at the turn of the century: steam locomotives huff and puff through the countryside, mountain railways make hitherto remote hideaways and panoramas accessible. The tourist industry is gradually taking off: fashionable hotels spring up in towns and cities, along lakes and in the mountains.

Discriminating consumers all over the world are demanding elegant china. The Langenthal Swiss China Works is founded in 1906. It is the supplier of stylish china to leading Swiss restaurants and hotels not to mention private households, a distinction which it enjoys until the present day.

Today Langenthal Swiss China Works Ltd. is a highly specialized company with a combined staff and workforce of 250 and annual sales of ca. SFr. 30 million. It is still Switzerland's only china manufacturer, specializing in quality Swiss hard porcelain. High quality raw materials, stylish design, lustrous glaze, high resistance to fracture, and ultratough dishwasher-oven- and microwave-safe patterns are the hallmarks of Langenthal's china.

Langenthal's completely novel Bopla! series (the name comes from the French beau plat or "attractive plate") is yet another promising milestone in the company's almost hundred-year history. The successful launching of this innovative tableware idea in Switzerland in autumn of 1993 was followed by venturing out into foreign markets. Bopla! was introduced to Austria, Germany and France in 1994, with Italy, Spain and Greece to follow by the end of 1995. Since January 1996 BOPLA! is available in the USA. ■
