Pint sized Switzerland has a population of a mere 7,3 million. Yet many Swiss go out into the world and make meaningful contributions that lead to international reputation.

Such a person is Ueli Steiger, Cinematographer par excellence. He has been the man behind the camera, or rather, he directs his camera crew – in such important feature productions as "The Patriot", "Austin Powers", "The Spy Who Shagged Me", "Just Visiting", "Bowfinger", "Godzilla", "The Day Before Yesterday" and more.

Ueli Steiger was born and educated in Switzerland. Already early in his childhood he was drawn to movies and was fascinated by those celluloid strips telling a story. He graduated from the University of Zürich with an MA in English Literature, Linguistics and Art History. His studies at the London International Film School gave him important experience in the art of cinematography. Jobs in Europe followed. But his aim was Hollywood where he was offered to shoot his first feature "Promised Land" with Dennis Hopper. "Hot Spot" followed and soon Ueli Steiger's talent led to new film projects. Today he is well established in Screenland's Metropolis.

stage by Ian Birnie of Los Angeles County Museum of Art (LACMA). The audience was treated to a rare look behind the scenes on a day Ueli Steiger's favored place: behind a movie camera! Filming is his life, whether inside a studio, or anywhere in the world.

On January 11, Steiger was honored at the Goethe Institut, Los Angeles. After introductions by Bernd Desinger, Director of the Goethe Institut, and Swiss Consul General Brigitta Schoch Dettweiler, Steiger was interviewed on of movie shooting. "The Day After Tomorrow" was a real challenge, even for the seasoned cinematographer, due to the incredible visual effects, such as a Tsunami engulfing New York City. The scenes were shot on an inside stage with real water and 250 movie Extras getting wet for an entire week.

Studying the script and discussing the scenes with the Director, Ueli actually wondered, how he was going to accomplish creating the desired effects. But, as he stated, there is never just one way to do something – there are really about 300 or 400 ways to do so, and when shooting visual or special effects, it is a process of step-by-step decisions by the minute.

The company that created the visual effects, Buf, Inc. Paris/Los Angeles, was represented that evening by another young Swiss, Giacun Caduff, Assistant to the producer.

The next project will take Steiger to Africa for six months to capture Roland Emmerich's epic "Ten Thousand B.C."

No doubt we will hear more about this outstanding cinematographer.

Swiss Roots is up and running!

www.swissroots.org offers information on Switzerland, allows the user to search for Swiss family ties, facilitates communication with Swiss friends and relatives, and brings Switzerland and the U.S. closer together. Swiss Roots also highlights an extensive program of Swiss-related events all over the United States with a particular focus on areas having a high concentration of people with Swiss ancestry.

What do actress Renée Zellweger, General Motors vice-chairman Bob Lutz, Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Ben Röthlisberger, General Johann August Sutter, master bridge builder Othmar Ammann and car constructor Louis Chevrolet have in common? They are all Americans with Swiss roots. Since the early 18th century, thousands of Swiss citizens have emigrated to the U.S. – motivated by curiosity, hopes for a better future, or because of economic hardship in Switzerland.

Today, there are more than one million Americans with Swiss roots, over 5,000 American cities with Swiss names, and countless U.S. citizens who are intrigued by the culture, diversity, and beauty of Switzerland. By the same token, there are many Swiss who have strong affinities to the U.S. for reasons such as tradition, personal interest, or a fascination with the American way of life.

Beginning in 2006, all of these people will be able to explore their interest in Switzerland by visiting www.swissroots.org. This website is part of the Swiss Roots project organized by the Consulate General of Switzerland in New York and the official Swiss representations in the U.S., in cooperation with numerous local Swiss associations. Swiss Roots is supported by Switzerland promotion agencies such as Presence Switzerland, Switzerland Tourism, and Pro Helvetia. The project offers a platform to promote cultural, tourist, and economic interaction between the U.S. and Switzerland.

The Swiss Roots events program: a threefold approach

Swiss Roots features three types of events: first, the events with nationwide dimension, such as the Ellis Island Immigrations Exhibition, the Postal Bus Road Show and the Pro Helvetia Culture Program; secondly, the regional events happening in areas with the highest density of Americans with Swiss roots; and thirdly, the local events organized, supported and carried out by countless Swiss associations throughout the United States.

On a national level, the Ellis Island Exhibition will be one of the flagship events of Swiss Roots. The Swiss "Verein Migrationsmuseum" is producing a modern and interactive exhibit on Swiss immigration to the United States that will be shown in the Ellis Island Immigration Museum. The exhibit will open on July 29 and include the New York City Swiss National Day celebration. VIPs from Switzerland and the U.S. will be present at this event, including Federal Councilor Pascal Couchepin.

The goal of the Pro Helvetia Swiss Roots culture program is to bridge the gap with contemporary Switzerland: Pro Helvetia presents Swiss-American highlights in music, film, and architecture. In early September, "Erica Stucky & Roots of Communication" will feature a program of jazzy Swiss folk music in Chicago, Southern Wisconsin, San Francisco, Washington, and several other U.S. locations. In the fall, Los Angeles will set the stage for Swiss cinematography with the presentation of "Traditions – Transitions," a series of contemporary documentaries and Swiss music. Throughout the Swiss Roots year, the exhibition "Ticino Architecture" will tour drums and pipes will perform. On April 9, Swiss roots will appear at P.S.1, the Queens branch of New York's Museum of Modern Art, with the opening of "Reprocessing Reality", a show highlighting contemporary art, presented by various U.S. universities and architecture schools.

Regional Events in California, Midwest, and the East Coast

In areas with a high volume of Swiss immigrants, Swiss Roots organizes regional flagship events which will help to promote Swiss culture along with the Swiss Roots website. On April 8, Swiss Roots is partnering with the Fowler Museum in Los Angeles for a Swiss Day during the museum's carnival exhibition. Switzerland's carnival tradition will be highlighted and a "Basler Fasnachts-Clique" with the Swiss curator Claudia Spinelli. And on April 22, Swiss Roots will focus on the young and upcoming during Cal Day at the University of California, Berkley.

On June 10, another Swiss Roots event will take place at Philadelphia's Constitution Center. The Center, together with local Swiss associations, is organizing a Swiss Day featuring panel discussions on the "Sister Republics" and direct democracy. As an eye-catcher, a first time ever presentation of the Swiss "Bundesbrief" outside of Switzerland's national borders is planned in this context.

In the Midwest, Swiss Roots will be promoted in June at the "Swiss Sangerfest" in Toledo, Ohio, and again in September at the "Tell Festspele" of New Glarus, and the Green County Cheese days in Monroe, Wisconsin. All regional events will be linked by the Swiss Roots Postal Bus Road Show which features an old-style Swiss postal bus touring through the U.S.

In addition to the previously-mentioned national and regional events, Swiss Roots is featuring a wide range of local events organized by Swiss associations throughout the U.S. An overview of events can be found on the Swiss Roots website www.swiss-roots.org.

Share your Swissness

Swiss Roots is still looking for individuals and families who are traveling to Switzerland this year to explore the land of their forefathers. If you have been invited to a family reunion or are organizing one, we might include you in the "tell us your Swiss story" section of the Swiss Roots website. In particular those of you who are discovering the hometown of your ancestors for the first time should visit www.swissroots.org and share their story.

For the community tools section of the Swiss Roots website, we are interested in funny and intriguing

Swiss-related stories on heritage and immigration, lifestyle and sports, business, politics, arts, and travel. If you have an exciting story to tell and wish to share it with others, if you know interesting and unusual Swiss-related characters, if your relatives' forefathers had particularly moving immigration experiences, or if you know any great Swiss anecdotes, please go to www.swissroots.org, post your story and participate in the discussion forums.

If you run a Swiss club, have a Swiss restaurant or a Swiss style hotel and would like to appear on the Swiss Roots website, or if you would like to promote your 2006 events through Swiss Roots, please e-mail us at swissroots@nyc.rep.admin.ch.

Watch out for this 100 year old Postauto who will tour the US from the West coast to the East Coast. www.postbus.ch

A Swiss Icon on a mission "hits the road"

Postal Bus Roadshow through the U.S.

Swiss Roots is happily awaiting a visitor from Switzerland. It is neither a VIP from the political, economical or cultural sphere, nor a Swiss celebrity traveling through the country, but a 100 year-old icon from the Swiss postal transportation fleet.

The Postal Bus will be visiting the United States for 6 months and travel from the west to the east coast. As one of the national events within the Swiss Roots program it will mark the connection - or "fil rouge" if you will - between the seven regional Swiss Roots events taking place in the states of California, Ohio, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and New York.

The company PostBus (Switzerland's postal transportation services) has decided to choose an "Old-timer" for this voyage celebrating their 100 year history. This vintage postal bus will be loaded with nostalgic memories of times when Swiss postal transportation used mail coaches and sleighs as their main means for travelers, their luggage and the post office mail.

The touring "Old-timer" tells the story of how PostBus evolved from horses (for the coaches and sleighs) to horsepower, today transporting over 102 million commuters and scenic travelers every year. Traveling has become an integral part of everyday life for many. The incredible PostBus network covers 91 million vehicle-kilometers, enough to circle the globe five times every day!

Look out for the yellow icon as it travels through your area, listen for the unique three-tone horn "tu ta to" and participate in the fun activities with and around the bus.

Make sure to check the www.swissroots.org website regularly for coverage on past, ongoing and future appearances throughout the country.

Closure of the Consulate General of Switzerland in Houston

Governments, companies, organizations and institutions must adapt to changing needs. This forced the Swiss Federal Department of Foreign Affairs to restructure the world wide net of its diplomatic and consular representations. One of those measures to be implemented is the closure of the Consulate General of Switzerland in Houston and the opening of a Honorary Consulate later in the year 2006.

The files of persons registered with the Consulate General in Houston will be transferred to the Swiss representations indicated below.

The transfer of responsibilities is automatic and does not require any action on your part. All pending cases and open matters will be forwarded and an uninterrupted service will be provided by the Consulate General of Switzerland newly responsible for your area. However, as from the effective date all inquiries must be addressed to the new Swiss representations.

Thank you for your understanding and support. ■

Swiss Alps come to San Francisco

Inventioneering Architecture showcases Swiss architectural genius

Can you describe Swiss architecture and why it is so special?

This was one of the underlying themes of a 5-week exhibition and lecture series in San Francisco this past October, attended by over 2000 people, and coinciding with the new Swiss designed De Young Museum, by architects Jacques Herzog and Pierre de Meuron. Architects from Switzerland and the US, students, aficionados and the general public toured the 132-foot topographical rendition of the Swiss Alps, and filled a lecture hall for five lively presentations by top

Swiss architects. Organized by the four Swiss schools of architecture of the ETH Zurich, EPF Lausanne, USI Mendrisio, University of Geneva and swissnex, the show and lecture series sought to explain visually and verbally what differentiates Swiss architectural teaching, research, design and practice from American, and why people find it so appealing. In addition, visiting architects treated students of co-sponsors UC Berkeley College of Environmental Design/Architecture and the California College of Arts (CCA) to a classroom lecture during the week. Visiting Swiss architecture professors included Marc Angelil (ETH Zurich), Andrea Deplazes (ETH Zurich), Ines Lamunière (EPF Lausanne), Valerio Olgiati (USI Mendrisio) and Dirk Hebel and Jörg Stollman (ETH Zurich). Hebel and Stollman were also the creators of the exhibit platform, and own the architecture firm INSTANT.

Partial view of the 132 foot topographical rendition of the Swiss Alps. Over 2000 people attended the five-week exhibition.

"Our goal was to raise visibility for how our pedagogy and practice combine design and construction, what kind of results this creates, and how accepted this is in other parts of the world," states Professor Marc Angelil of ETH Zurich. "San Francisco -- a city with a vibrant international architectural community -- is fascinated by how the Swiss do it. Our goal was to create an interactive opportunity to bring both sides together in dialogue," explains project originator Dr. Christian Simm, Executive Director of swissnex.

The opening celebration was honored by the State Secretary Dr. Charles Kleiber, and heads of several cantons and institutions. To add to the excitement, former Consul General Roland Quillet hosted an evening reception to thank the San Francisco community for their continued support for Swiss architecture. The reception brought together the State Secretary and the cantonal delegation, Mr. Herzog and Mr. De Meuron, Harry Parker III, the Director of the De Young Museum and a large number of international architects and supporters.

The lectures are downloadable at www.architectureradio.org. The exhibition will complete a world tour prior to returning home to Switzerland -- next stop Boston!

How to Create your Own Business

Lessons from a Swiss Entrepreneur in the US

Shortly after beginning my MBA at Georgetown University in 2002, I decided to start my own business, an expansion of my family's Swiss skin care business, Alchimie Forever S.A.R.L., based in Geneva, Switzerland (www.alchimie-forever.com). Here are some of the lessons I learned.

Just do it!

There are two lines of thought as to when to start your own venture:

1. Start as early as possible and "just do it."
2. Gain experience in your specific industry while being paid, and then leave to set up your own firm, taking with you as many existing clients as possible.

I decided to go with strategy number one. Many suggested I first work at L'Oreal or Estee Lauder, but for me, there were three key reasons not to:

- You never know everything there is to know about your industry, so when do you decide you have learned enough and can now set out on your own?

- I was afraid of getting used to the paychecks, benefits, and lifestyle of a corporate job and not wanting to give them up.

- I had much less to lose right after business school than I would at age 40, a mother of three with a nice house and the accompanying mortgage.

Write a business plan

My first idea was to open a medical spa in the US. I wrote a 50 page business plan and then decided it was not an appealing project. This realization came after I wrote the business plan, not before, and not during the first 10 pages. Putting thoughts on paper and examining the marketplace in black and white is hard, but it is one of best ways to prepare for success.

It is better to have tried and failed than to never try at all...

For me, this is perhaps the most significant cultural difference between the US and Switzerland. In the US, future prospective employers would, if I chose them well, appreciate the fact that I tried my own venture as a sign of initiative and creativity. In Switzerland, a "failed" business venture and the ensuing bankruptcy remain something to be ashamed of, hidden from friends and family, and certainly not discussed in the professional arena.

Made in Switzerland

As a Swiss entrepreneur in the US, I have been able to gain marketing advantages from the fact that our skin care products are 100% made in Switzerland. Alchimie Forever is part of Swisscos, a Swiss association whose mission is to protect the "Made in Switzerland" label in cosmetics, which typically evokes feelings of high-quality, nature, and luxury in the consumers' minds.

Working 16 hour days for yourself so you don't have to work 8 for a boss...

Of all the definitions of entrepre-

Ada proudly showing off her products neurship, this is the one I most relate to. Creating my own business has entailed more work than almost any other possible career. But the benefits are immeasurable, including control, independence, responsibility, flexibility, glamour, constant challenges, and last but not least the potential to make a lot of money. Having my own business is the most fulfilling and exciting professional choice I have made to date. When I can't truthfully say that anymore, it will be time for me to go work for corporate America.

Until then, I remain a Swiss entrepreneur in the US pursuing my own version of the "American dream."

Three new Consul Generals have arrived in the US

Ulrich Hunn, Consul General of Switzerland, Atlanta

Born 1950 in Zofingen / Switzerland, where he completed his schooling and Education with the Federal Banking Diploma. He can look back over 30 years of Consular and Diplomatic Service. During his long career, he had assignments in Chicago, Havana, Dakar, Vancouver, Paris, Atlanta and London.

From 1988-92 he was in charge of the Personnel Administration Service of the Swiss Foreign Ministry and from 2001-2005 he was Consul General at the Swiss Embassy in London.

Mr. Hunn is married to Marie-Claire Hunn – Gonseth. They have two grown up daughters Melissa and Leonie. His hobbies include golfing, cycling, hiking and skiing.

Message from Consul General Hunn: Some of the readers of the Swiss Review might remember us from our first assignment in Atlanta from 1996 until 2001.

It is a great pleasure for my wife Marie-Claire and myself to come "back home" to Atlanta, after a four years assignment as Consul General in London. Many of our friends and business contacts from that time are still around, which makes it so much easier and quicker to become settled after only a few weeks.

One of my goals is to visit as many of the Swiss Clubs, Swiss businesses and Swiss related events in my very large consular district as possible. It is an important task of mine to recognize and support all Swiss related organizations and activities and I therefore hope to meet many of you during the coming months.

Ulrich Hunn

NEW JERSEY

Hudson Riding Club

The Hudson Riding Club, or the "HRC" as it is known, is a Swiss horseback riding club located in Northern New Jersey, but it draws riders from the entire New York City area. It rides weekly and organizes regular social events, as well as rides abroad. Founded in 1901, the Hudson Riding Club can look back on a rich history of tradition and of promoting the art of horsemanship and friendship amongst its members and their families.

Last June, both riders and non-riders went for a one-week trip to the Alentejo Estate Ride in Portugal. This was in the interior of the country, East of Lisbon. Everybody participated in a day trip to the Atlantic Ocean, a tour of Alter do Chao, one of two national Lusitano stud farms, and watched a Portuguese bull fight. The riders rode from one estate to the next on superb horses, while the non-riders took sightseeing tours to local points of interest. The HCR stayed on the estates and country inns, enjoying gracious hospitality and great meals. Another highlight were the fantastic lunch picnics in the countryside under the Portuguese cork trees. We could count the total number of cars we saw in seven days on just two hands.

The HRC season begins in October and runs until June. The rides take place at the Essex Equestrian Center in West Orange, New Jersey, a short distance from Manhattan. As this is in a hall, riding is possible throughout the winter season. The club practices English horsemanship. The riding master is a trained Swiss cavalry horseman and the riders perform simple formation activities. The members meet one evening per week for one hour riding. The HRC has several Swiss traditions. The open fire Raclette party is held in early November in Morristown, NJ and in December, Santa Claus pays a visit to a cocktail and dinner party. At the end of the riding season a Closing Party honors special riding achievers.

All interested in the "King of sports and the sport of kings" are invited to contact the Hudson Riding Club through it's website www.hudsonridingclub.com (President or Riding Master) or e-mail at secretary@hudsonridingclub.com.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A Worthy 25th Silver Anniversary Concert

Remembering the 25th Pacific Coast Swiss Singing and Yodeling Festival, held in June 2005 in Long Beach, California

The writing of the essay below is merely my way to express my most sincere gratitude to the members of the Grand Concert. My wife and I have participated in the last 13 Festivals and worked actively on the USSSPC since the late sixties. Due to some physical handicaps, we were unable to attend the 25th Festival. I received the CD's a few weeks ago. In the large collection of Swiss music and folklore we have, your CD's will always remain second to none. We will never get tired of listening!

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the nearly 30 numbers of the program was their rich variety. Seldom before, if ever, has a Grand Concert shown so many varied presentations of Swiss Folklore from so many parts of Switzerland. A special delight were typical Swiss musical instruments.

No less remarkable was the quality of the singing of the Massed Choir. The dynamics, the attacks and releases, the tempi, the moods and expressions of the melodies, all were on a high artistic level hardly rendered by any of the past Grand Concerts. It was a great tribute to the outstanding musicianship and talent of Mr. Rodger Whitten, Festival Music Director.

Many of the choral numbers have never before been presented by any of the member societies. They will be a welcome enrichment to the repertoire for their own public performances. One is tempted to write little essays for each of the songs – their words and melodies so nostalgic, tender and heartwarming that it stirs one's heart with gratitude for our Swiss heritage. A special tribute to those who were responsible for the selection of the songs.

Last but not least – what a wonderful idea of the Festival President, Mrs. Wal Baur, to have the Grand Concert recorded on two CD's in a highly professional manner. We will relive the beauties of the 25th Grand Concert for years to come.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA / NEVADA

BELAIR Flights from San Francisco and Las Vegas will return in June

Starting June 29th, the Swiss tour operator Hotelplan will resume its charter flights to and from the Bay Area. Hotelplan, a Migros owned company, will again operate its own BELAIR Boeing 767-300 airplane nonstop from SFO to Zurich. It will feature a convenient weekly schedule with flights leaving SFO every Thursday evening. On the return flight, BELAIR will go nonstop to Las Vegas and then continue on to SFO, after a short stop to clear customs.

This flight will again be the only nonstop connection from the Bay Area to Switzerland. It is a commitment by Hotelplan to California as a tourist destination as well as to the Swiss-American community that has been the loyal foundation of these flights in the past.

"A to Z Travel Planners" in San Jose and San Francisco based Fugazi Travel will continue to be Hotelplan's official representation in the Bay Area for this flight. Both retailers have very close ties to the Swiss-American community and will assure the continuity that this flight is based on. It should be mentioned that Gaby Burkert will also continue to promote and sell BELAIR flights to her loyal clientele in the wine country.

Hotelplan is proud of this "best kept transatlantic secret" and hopes to serve many of you either in one of the 210 Economy Class seats or in the almost legendary RELAX CLASS. An attractive schedule and prices still below $1000.- should make this flight a big success once again! ■

KANSAS

Swiss "can do spirit" lives on in Bern, Kansas

Bern, Kansas is a little farming village of 220 people somewhat off the beaten path with a big unlimited horizon both in spirit and fact as well as Swiss perseverance and doggedness.

Last October, Bern inaugurated the completion of a Community support funds from the KAN-STEP program (Small Towns Environment Project). Today, two years later, this center was the cause of all these festivities.

Contrary to most small settlements in the US, Berne is thriving. The rejuvenation started many years ago with the establishment of a local Meat Processing Plant, followed with the expansion of the Local

The new Community Center in Bern

Center in the presence of dignitaries from the State of Kansas and the Swiss Consul General, Mr. Armin Meile. He brought greetings, congratulations and gifts from the City of Berne, Switzerland and the Swiss Government.

This Community Center is the result of the villager's desire not to let tragedy act as a detrimental, destructive influence. A few years ago, a fire destroyed a store building. This created a new opportunity. Local citizens donated the land, equipment, and more than 5000 hours of volunteer labor to match Agricultural Services Business consisting of several enormous silos. Next came a Dog Food Factory, which was expanded a couple of years ago. All this created new employment opportunities.

The Bern Café, the Center of the local social life, was recently purchased and completely renovated by the citizenship. And some time ago, a Public Library of several thousand books with a full-time librarian joined this list of accomplishments. The collection even has a substantial section on the old Bern and Switzerland, which Efforts throughout the years as presented by Bern, Kansas, can only be applauded and must be supported at all levels. Even after six generations, this represents the Swiss "can do" spirit at its best. Erdmann Schmocker ■
