REGIONAL NEWS

SOUTHERN AFRICA

Editorial

Dear readers,

■ The war in Ukraine and its economic impact poses a major challenge for regions such as southern Africa. Once again it is the poorest who suffer the most and are helpless against rising living costs. In the coming years, the primary focus in southern Africa will be on improving food security. A Swiss project has just been launched in Zambia to help reduce hunger over the next five years - see article.

■ Warm regards,
Gisela Piercey

A new Swiss project aims to improve food security and nutrition in Zambia

NIRAS Zambia, the Community Technology Development Trust and the Swiss based Research Institute of Organic Agriculture with support from the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (SDC) have launched a new five year US$10 million food security initiative – Markets and Seeds Access Project (MASAP) – to reduce hunger, malnutrition and poverty in Zambia.

Agriculture is the backbone of Zambia's economy. More than 80% of Zambians are employed in the agricultural sector with 90% of those being women. Therefore, accelerating agricultural growth is a key means of eradicating poverty and increasing food security in rural areas where poverty is widespread.

MASAP will link smallholder farmers with seed and commodity producers and farmers' associations. Different stakeholders in both urban and rural areas such as seed companies, commodity processors, insurance companies and financial institutions will also be engaged.

The crops targeted by the project – common bean, cowpea, groundnuts, pigeon pea and soybean etc. are the foundation of Zambia's food and nutrition security and a source of income for many smallholder farmers. Nevertheless, the competitiveness and profitability of most smallholder legume farmers are constrained by low productivity due to limited access to improved seed and limited markets.

Speaking during of the MASAP launch event in Zambia, SDC Head of Cooperation in Harare, Dr. Frédérique Weyer said, "The success of agriculture in Zambia and everywhere else in the region is highly dependent on easy access to high-quality, improved seed. For Switzerland, seed is a key input for improving agricultural productivity and ensuring food security, and access to quality seed facilitates food resource diversification and improved nutrition at the household level." The launch of the project hapned during a time when Switzerland is working on a new bilateral cooperation programme with Zambia that will focus on food systems, health, social protection, climate change and governance. A key Swiss priority in the new cooperation programme will be to partner with the Zambian government and the private sector among other actors to advance the country's self-reliance through more effective enterprise-driven economic growth, and increased resilience among its vulnerable citizens.

In addition to Zambia, the project will also be implemented in Zimbabwe.

KATTI STASHED N$100M IN SWISS BANK

Businessman Knowledge Katti stashed more than N$100 million in a bank in Switzerland from 2010 to 2013 – the period he was accused of cheating his business partners, doing favours for politicians, and speculating with oil and phosphate licences in Namibia.

It was also around the same time that the Bank of Namibia's Financial Intelligence Centre (FIC) started questioning the flow of money from his bank accounts, some of which was allegedly paid to government officials to access exploration deals. Katti is among more than 20 Namibians or people linked to Namibia named in the leak of secret bank accounts held by Credit Suisse in Switzerland.

Banks are increasingly under pressure to be extra careful when dealing with suspicious clients, widely known as 'politically exposed' individuals. Politically exposed individuals are those who are or have been entrusted with a public function, such as that of president or minister. The definition, according to the FIC, extends to their close associates.

Katti is considered politically exposed because of his close ties with politicians such as president Hage Geingob, ex-energy minister Obeth Kandjoze, who is currently the director of the National Planning Commission, former justice minister Pendukeni Iivula-Ithana, and former Public Service Commission member Teckla Lameck. Katti has paid N$200 000 towards Geingob's medical expenses at the same time he was executing his oil speculation deals.

The businessman has in the past denied any wrongdoing relating to his role in oil deals. It is not clear where Katti's Switzerland millions originated from, but the cash flow coincided with his involvement in two natural resource-based deals between 2010 to 2013.

Katti is not considered to have committed any crime.

ONLINE DESK FOR SWISS NATIONALS RESIDING ABROAD

The Federal Department of Foreign Affairs (FDFA) is providing Swiss nationals residing abroad with an online desk for consular services.

This allows you to view and update your data, for example change of address or civil status. You also have the possibility to order certain documents online and pay for them by credit card.

The desk can be accessed on the FDFA website www.eda.admin.ch under 'Online desk' and on the websites of the Swiss representations.

We plan to expand the services offered via the online desk on an ongoing basis and hope that with this innovation, Swiss nationals residing abroad will be able to communicate even more easily with the Swiss representations abroad.

If you have any questions concerning the online desk, please contact the Regional Consular Centre Southern Africa in Pretoria (southernafrica@eda.admin.ch).

■ On 8th March we held our 2nd virtual AGM and the committee was re-elected with the exception of the Secretary, Biffy van Rooyen and BeisitzerIn Jeannette Bühler-Alfaia who both stepped down due to their work load commitments. The club is now looking for suitable candidates to fill these two vacant positions. On a sad note, an obituary for Edwin Walliser, an erstwhile president of the Club in the 1980's, was read by Sonja Bosch. Edwin passed away in late February this year.

The club is now looking forward to a more social interaction this coming year with a planned Fondue Evening and the 1st August Celebration on Saturday, 30th July.
