Financial Structure

The ordinary account covers the permanent tasks of the ICRC, its infrastructure and all activities without special financing. In 1979, the income on the ordinary account was 30.4 million Swiss francs and the expenditure 30.5 million Swiss francs (see Table III). Most of the income—22.6 million francs—came from regular contributions by governments and National Societies.

The special account covers large-scale operations for which special appeals are made. In 1979, the income for these operations totalled 76.2 million and the expenditure 71.3 million (see Table VI). The income and expenditure were respectively credited and debited to the Fund for specially financed operations; these movements are given in Table VI.

The ICRC also has a Fund for relief actions. The sources of income of this Fund are the annual public collection in Switzerland and various donations. The use made of this Fund is shown in Table X.

In addition to its own accounts the ICRC manages a certain number of special funds such as those of the "Indochina Bureau" (INDSEC), the Foundation for the ICRC, the Augusta Fund, the Florence Nightingale Medal Fund, the Clare R. Benedict Fund, the Maurice de Madre Fund. The balance sheets and expenditure and income accounts are given in Tables on pages 96-97 and 99 to 103.

Financing

These results though encouraging were not wholly satisfactory. Compared with 1978, the increase in government contributions to the ordinary budget amounted to 3.9 million Swiss francs, 2 million of which came from the Swiss Government. The latter again made the largest donation (14.5 million Swiss francs). Moreover, several other countries, such as Austria, Canada, Colombia, the United States, France, Japan, the United Kingdom and Sweden adjusted their previous contributions. It should be noted that in 1979 the People's Republic of China sent its first contribution.

It is nevertheless unfortunate that not all governments have yet realized the importance of sending regular contributions in keeping with the world-wide activities of the ICRC. Yet, pursuant to the resolution of the 1949 Diplomatic Conference and other resolutions passed at various international conferences, they ought to give it the financial support it requires. In 1979, however, 66 out of the 145 States parties to the Geneva Conventions did not contribute to the ordinary budget.

National Society contributions rose from 1,813,000 Swiss francs in 1978 to 1,832,000 in 1979. Out of 126 National Societies, 61 did not respond to the ICRC appeals. It is essential that financing should be sufficient for the tasks the ICRC has to assume. This applies not only to special budgets but equally to its ordinary budget, which covers its permanent activities. It will therefore have to step up its efforts to increase its income, especially since, in 1980, out of a total of 34.4 million Swiss francs in the ordinary budget, the expected income amounts to 27.8 million, so that a deficit of 6.6 million will have to be made up by additional income. To achieve this aim the Financing Division has been reinforced by the appointment of Mr. Serge Nessi as its chief.

Balance Sheet

The total increase of the balance sheet from 27.4 million Swiss francs at the end of 1978 to 36.6 million Swiss francs at the end of 1979 is unusual. Sizeable contributions received at the end of the year for large-scale operations increased the liquid assets. This, however, does not imply a surplus as these amounts are earmarked for operations continuing into 1980.

In view of its increased activities, the ICRC has to take certain steps to intensify its efforts and be prepared for any emergencies. To this end, the general Reserve, which according to a prudent estimate must equal half the annual budget to fulfil its role, was increased by 1.25 million taken from the excess of receipts over expenditure. Moreover, since the headquarters in Geneva has become too crowded, 1 million Swiss francs (round figure) have been allocated for additional offices that the ICRC will occupy in 1980 and 1981.

Expenditure and Income

There was a small deficit of 120,066 Swiss francs. This would have been much more had it not been for the strict management of funds. Owing to monthly audits, even weekly in the case of difficult operations, it was possible to keep a close check on expenses and income and avoid unpleasant surprises at the end of the financial year.

Auditing

As in previous years, the ICRC accounts were audited by the "Société fiduciaire OFOR SA", appointed in accordance with the ICRC Statutes.

A photocopy of the auditor's letter proposing that the 1979 accounts be approved has been reproduced on page 104.
