release of Swiss dollar balances blocked in the United States since 1941, Switzerland has substantial amounts of capital awaiting investment. But as Switzerland has no natural sources of new materials and lives by processing those she imports, and as her heavy foreign trade deficit is balanced only by the yield from her investments in other countries, Switzerland cannot afford to lend except where her capital is amply secured and where punctual payments of interest and dividends are assured.

For that reason most loans and credits granted by Switzerland since the end of the war have been transactions between Governments. Swiss bankers now are eager to resume direct lending.

They say that bankers in close personal contact with prospective borrowers in other countries are far better able to assess credit-worthiness than any bureaucratic authority. They add that money would flow far more easily to where it could be used with maximum productivity if lending again were returned to private hands.

Since the hostilities ceased, recovery in Europe has been retarded wherever private initiative has been impeded, whether by adoption of a planned economy or by military occupation, these bankers assert. No economy they say, can flourish where political considerations take precedence over economic necessities.

BANKERS BACK MARSHALL PLAN.

Bankers and business men in Switzerland are convinced that under the Marshall Plan, sponsored by the United States, the rights of the individual's inviolability of private ownership and the sanctity of contracts would be upheld. Under such conditions Switzerland would feel safe in permitting the utilization of her resources - up to the natural limits of her capacity - for acceleration of the recovery of Europe, they declared.

Those competent to speak for the Swiss investor are eager at this moment to emphasize these convictions because other proposals to help Europe have been made by Argentina. As far as Switzerland is concerned, no question of a choice between the two projects could arise for the reasons already given.

Swiss observers quote United States Under-Secretary of State, Norman Armour who, when asked at his Press conference in Washington July 9th whether the Argentine note contained any indication of a willingness to go along with the United States on the Marshall Plan, answered that he "didn't think there was anything as concrete as that, the offer of help having been expressed in more general terms." Finance authorities here say that the Swiss investor, from whom, in the last analysis, the money must come, is ready to trust the United States implicitly because with Washington he knows exactly where he stands.

SOUP ECONOMY IN MUSHROOMS.

Mushrooms, practically the foundation of every gourmet dish, become less of a luxury when they're eaten up every bit. Use the stems and peelings for a delicately flavoured soup.

SHERRIED MUSHROOM SOUP. ... (Serves 4).

Mushroom stems and peelings from one pound of mushrooms.

One (1) Onion slice

Two (2) cups water

Three (3) tablespoons margarine.

Three (3) tablespoons flour

Half teaspoon salt

Few grains pepper

One-and-a-half ($1\frac{1}{2}$) cups of Milk

One (1) tablespoon Sherry.

Combine mushroom stems and peelings, onion and water. Cover and simmer for twenty (20) minutes. Press through sieve. There should be $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups.

Melt margarine, blend in flour, salt and pepper. Gradually add milk and mushroom puree. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add sherry to taste. Serve immediately.
