functions, as for example, to the General Staff. The appointment of a Commander-in-Chief is made by the Federal Council. The appointment of a General and of the Chief of the General Staff, when the Army is on active service, is a matter which is decided by the Federal Assembly. The absence of any form of decorations and of high ranks, is due to the particular attitude which prevails as regards military matters in this country, where the soldier is considered to be subordinate to the civilian and where any form of ostentatious display is heartily disliked for a democracy whose army is purely defensive and has not taken part in any wars for a long time. If military displays do occur occasionally, this only happens as a result of some external necessity. Thus, during those years when National Socialism was looked upon as being a great, imminent danger, the people demanded military parades and displays, because for them the will to be free and the spirit of resistance was embodied in their Army. In peace-time however, all such demonstrations are avoided. And this shows a further peculiarity of our system, namely, the practical manner in which our military instruction is directed. Drill is cut down to a minimum and - by the way - even this minimum is criticised by our public opinion. Modern warfare demands that the greatest care should be expended on the training of the military technicians, in order that they may be thoroughly conversant with the use of mechanised weapons. It must be stressed, however, that it is only possible to curtail drill in the Swiss Army to such a minimum because of the very high standard of education which exists in the country and the good upbringing which the generality of recruits have had in their homes.

DAS SCHWEIZERLAND

Dort fern im Schweizerland, da liegt mein Heimatort,
Es ist gar lang schon her, dass ich von dort bin fort,
Doch die Erinnerung, die bleibt mir stets gewiss,
dass ich das Schweizerland ja nie vergiss,

Es war im Schweizerland, wo meine Wiege stand,
Im schönen freien Schweizerland.

O holde Kinderzeit, noch einmal kehr zurück,
Wo spielend ich genoss, das allerhöchste Glück,
Wo ich am Vaterhaus, auf grüner Wiese stand,
Und weithin schaute auf mein Heimatland,

Es war im Schweizerland, wo meine Wiege stand,
Im schönen freien Schweizerland.

Nur einmal noch, o Herr, lass mich die Heimat seh'n,
Das schöne Schweizerland, die Täler und die Höh'n,
Dann kehr' ich gern zurück, und rufe freudig aus,
behüt' Dich Schweizerland, ich bleib zu Haus,

Es war im Schweizerland, wo meine Wiege stand,
Im schönen freien Schweizerland.

SWISS FEDERAL RAILROADS IN 1948.

During 1948, 206.8 million persons travelled by Rail, being a decrease of six (6) million as compared with the figures for 1947. Despite this diminution in the number of passengers, due to the higher tariffs revenue increased from 270 to 276 million Swiss francs.

In Goods Traffic, a decline is recorded as from the middle of the year, but the total is still about the same as 1947, i.e. 18.4 million tons of freight, whereas there has been an increase in receipts of one million francs, the total being 342.6 million francs.

In comparison, unfortunately, a sharp increase in expenditure is noted, 1947 figure showing as 443 million francs against a sum for 1948 of 486.5 million francs.

LUZERN.

On January 15th, a picture of the famous Spanish Painter, Goya, was stolen from the Museum of Agen (France). The culprits, an 80 year old woman and her son, were arrested by the Security Police in Lucerne, being passengers on the Gotthard Express on their way to central Switzerland. This valuable picture was recovered wrapped in a roll of old French newspapers, in a nearby compartment of the train. This woman and her escort had been sought by the police of many countries over a number of years as they were specialised in the theft of pictures.

PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS.

A Referendum was launched against the Federal Law which gives authority to the Federal Government to compel the people to submit to a periodical X-Ray examination. This opposition comes from circles which are opposed to any centralisation and in particular, to any increase in the powers of the Government concerning personal freedom. The advocates of the law, headed by Professor C. Henschen of Basle, maintain that success in the fight against this illness can only be achieved by the whole of the population periodically reporting for X-Ray examination. Hygiene is principally a matter for the Cantons but the Confederation is entitled to take precautionary measures regarding infectious illnesses. As a result of the opposition to the Federal Law, this matter will now be submitted to the referendum.

THE NEW HOLIDAY TICKETS.

During the war Holiday Season Tickets were introduced with a view to encouraging the Swiss to tour their own country, and owing to the reduction in price they offered, met with immediate and ever increasing popularity. Renamed "Holiday Ticket" the Holiday Season Ticket has now become a permanent institution, at the same time undergoing certain modification which considerably broaden its scope. This new Holiday Ticket can now be purchased outside the country itself from all Travel Agencies that sell Swiss Railway Tickets. There is no doubt that it will soon be used by all those who travel to Switzerland for their holidays by rail, since it combines a considerable reduction in price with the greatest latitude of use. The basic ticket costs Fr.25.- in First Class, Fr.20.- in Second and Fr.15.- in Third. To this is attached the ticket covering travel from the point of departure to destination, either by the direct or any other route, and back - namely, a return or round-trip ticket, which is charged at half the normal rate. The holder of the Holiday Ticket can also make a certain number of excursions from points along his route, likewise at half price. It should be noted that the Holiday Ticket, the ticket for the main journey, and those for the excursions, can all be purchased and paid for by the traveller in his home town, be this London, Paris, or Kalamazoo. This facilitation is available not only on the railways but also on the boats and on the postal motorcoach lines. The period of validity of the Holiday Ticket is one month, but can be prolonged for an additional month on payment of 20% of the fare.
