to us. This was a most entertaining (Trip) through a country unknown to all of us and everybody was delighted with colour and scenery. We wish to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Aubaret again for his generosity.

In the second half of the programme Miss Lotty Hess entertained with a Quiz session. Various subjects, like Swiss Geography, Swiss History, etc., could be chosen. Many members were very enthusiastic and came forward to be questioned. This people then were presented with prizes.

The evening concluded with a delicious supper which consisted mostly of home-made Swiss specialities. This gathering was a real success as all members of the consulate as well as 90% of the Club members were present.

Obituary

MRS. ANNA MARIA DUSS died in her 91st year at Napier on 27th March, 1958. Mrs. Duss arrived with her husband, the late Leo Duss, in Taranaki in 1909. Mr. Duss however was so homesick that he took ill and died only a year later, leaving her a widow. After the death of her husband Mrs. Duss took up the occupation of a housekeeper and as such was very capable and universally well liked. She possessed a natural humour and was never short of a quick answer. On Swiss and Church functions she was always a willing helper and organiser. The last years of her life she lived under the care of the Saint Joseph Old Peoples' Home in Napier. Her last wish was that she be buried in the grave of her husband in Manaia.

QUESTION AND ANSWER COLUMN

Question:

I am told that if I marry a New Zealander, or any other man of a different nationality, I can still keep my Swiss Citizenship. Is this correct?

Answer:

YES—if BEFORE your marriage you make a formal declaration stating your wish to retain your Swiss Nationality (Schweizerbuergerrecht).

—A.B.

SWISS RECIPES

Zwiebelwaehe:

Take 2 lbs. onions, chop finely and fry in fat until golden brown. Let cool somewhat and then mix with three eggs, $\frac{1}{4}$ pint cream and salt to taste. Pour this mixture onto a shallow tray, which has been lined with puff pastry. Mixture should not be higher than 1 cm. Cover it all with thin slices of lean bacon and bake. Eat hot. Quantity is enough for 4-6 persons.

Tea punch for the coming cold evenings:

1 pint strong tea, three small bottles of red table wine, 12ozs. sugar, one lemon, into which several whole cloves have been pushed. Bring everything to the boil, remove from fire and mix in $\frac{1}{4}$ pint rum. Serve hot.

OVERPRODUCTION OF BUTTER AND CHEESE IN SWITZERLAND

OUT of Max Nef's "Lookround from Switzerland," dated 3rd April 1958, we can see that not only here in New Zealand but in most other dairying countries in the world is the production of butter and cheese presenting the governments concerned with serious problems, but also in Switzerland the authorities are suffering from the same sort of headache.

Switzerland's cattle population at present is about equal to pre-war, but fewer hands are producing more food through scientific breeding, selection, general improved health of the stock and mechanisation to a very high degree. However, this greatly increased output in turn is facing a marked change, brought about by changed habits in diet, not only of the town—but in particular the land population is enjoying a more diversified table.

In the post-war period the Swiss farmer found it hard to compete with a very buoyant labour market from the manufacturing and exporting industries and in spite of the high prices ruling at that time it was difficult for him to make ends meet. So mother Helvetia was required to grant liberal subsidies to the farmers in order to keep the index for food at a reasonable level and both the worker and the farmer happy. No limit was placed on the level of production however, and because of a better know how to produce, dairy farming became quite profitable. As a result now, the increased subsidies are leading to an increased output, for which a market is hard to find and therefore aggravating the unpleasant situation just about daily.

At present now however, the Federal Government apparently has decided that something should be done before getting out of hand altogether. It has brought the whole bill out into the open and published all the figures concerned, causing an enormous surprise followed by an unusually lively discussion and criticism.

The just closed spring session of the parliament had refused to discuss the situation at present, stating to be too busy and what next is everybody's guess.

Will it be a conditionary period for the farmer to prepare himself for a shock later on and produce less, or will the Swiss farmer join the bandwagon in London with a new label: "Finest Swiss Alpine Meadow Butter for Sale at 1/9d. per lb.?"

SWITZERLAND BUILDS WORLD'S HIGHEST SKYSCRAPER MADE OF BRICKS

ZURICH, Switzerland: The world's highest skyscraper entirely made of bricks will soon be completed in the Zurich suburb of Schwamendingen (pop. 28,000), it was announced here recently at a meeting of the Swiss Brick Manufacturers' Association. The building will be 175ft. high and contain 68 flats in 18 storeys. A pioneer in the field of brick skyscrapers, Mr. A. Gfeller, a Basel architect, who designed Basel's three model 13-storey buildings in 1949, said that bricks are "economical and appropriate" for the construction of large apartment houses, whereas for tall office buildings steel skeletons have proved more efficient. There are four large factories in Switzerland which produce a special type of bricks meeting all requirements of skyscraper building.
