Happiest Kiwis in Los Angeles sport sunny Tahitian tans and funny French accents. GUESS HOW THEY FLEW!

UTA-FRENCH AIRLINES, of course. Every Wednesday and Friday evening there's laughter on the side-walks of Los Angeles. The UTA-FRENCH AIRLINES flight from New Zealand via Tahiti is in town with the most delightfully relaxed people you could ever wish to meet.

There's a good deal of decidedly un-Kiwi-like handwaving and shrugging. The ladies parade a hint of a lilting accent (shades of that wonderful tri-lingual hostess), with clothes and perfumes that could only have come from Paris via Tahiti.

Something else? That suntan reminder of Tahiti, surely the most glorious stop-over in the world. And captivating French hospitality and service, decor and cuisine. Plus sleek D.C.8. Intercontinental jetliners.

That's why the happiest Kiwis in L.A. flew in by UTA-FRENCH AIRLINES. Two flights each week to North America (and onwards to Europe). Don't forget, the service is jet, the difference is French and you stop over in Tahiti at no extra air fare. Your travel agent shares our enthusiasm. So will you!
