the Swiss Mercantile Society (SKV) in Lucerne. Federal Councillor Tschudi attended the 125th anniversary of the Swiss Pharmacists' organisation in Basle.

Several European meetings took place in Switzerland: members of the working group on dental decay met in Basle early in July, the European Carton Makers' Association and the heads of European departmental stores in Zurich, whilst the European Cattle and Meat Traders gathered at Montreux.

At international level, Zurich was the venue for the Puppet Festival, the 21st Congress of the International Metalworkers' Federation (at which it was resolved that the worker should have more to say in the running of affairs), and the Kiwani Clubs. In Berne met the Young Baptists from all over the world, the Federation of Socialist and Democratic Press, and the 9th Congress for Genealogic and Heraldic Sciences was organised there early in July. Applied geology was the subject of a symposium in Sion, and protection from nuclear rays of one held in Interlaken. The "Federation Internationale de Centres Touristiques" met in St. Gall, and experts on high tension from 31 countries attended a demonstration at Brown Boveri's at Baden. The "vets" met at Appenzell, and the "medicos" on the Buergenstock. 600 delegates from 25 countries were represented at the Jewish World Congress from 8th to 11th July.
