unrealistic in peacetime. The second proposal proposes voluntary service, available for emergencies and catastrophies. A third proposal wants an auxiliary organisation on a purely voluntary basis of a nature to impress Youth of its responsibility and obligation toward the State and community, it being in the line of national service. The final proposal rests on the premise of voluntary social service run along the lines of the "Zürich social service year" already existing.

The debates of above proposals have their origin in the now accomplished political rights of women. The military department is also considering the aspects of such proposals. Although the department is fully aware of the implications, such innovations, be they voluntary or compulsory, would require a national vote.

At the time of going to press there remain only four cantons who have not yet accepted women's vote on cantonal level. Three of them (Nidwalden, Obwalden and Appenzell Ausserrhoden) will vote in this matter in the near future. Appenzell Innerrhoden remains adamant. —"Tages-Anzeiger".
