SWITZERLAND

OPEN AND SHUT CASE

In order to cut costs, many police stations in Switzerland are no longer manned 24 hours a day. At least this cartoon can see the funny side of it: - Some paper and pencil to write your own accident report. - An emergency telephone which is out of order. - A first aid kit in case someone has put a knife into your back. - A fire hose should your car have burst into flames (preferably right in front of the police station). As everywhere else in this modern world, not only is it "users pay" but users have also to help themselves as well.

Have you noticed now how peaceful it can be around a police station.
