Looking for peace.....
In search of Utopia ?.....

Christmas has come and gone and by now some of our New Year's resolutions may already have been abandoned as well!?

The question we can ask ourselves at the beginning of a new stretch of life is; what am I looking for, that may bring happiness to my people and myself? Depending on circumstances each one of us will have different expectations for happiness to come our way. During moments of enlightenment we may realise that we need peace of mind and heart as much as anything else (like health and prosperity) to find a full measure of 'earthly' happiness, if there is such a thing as a full measure!

So in order to measure the amount of happiness in our lives we need but to analyse how peaceful we live our daily lives. - But the pessimist will say; how can we be happy in unhappy surroundings? Maybe in a broken or disturbed relationship, be it in family or with individuals? Perhaps in a country where true justice is lacking. In a world where there are places not recognising the sacredness and dignity of human life, where life itself becomes possible only for the fittest, where there is lust for ethnic cleansing , or where the rich are getting richer with the implication that the poor are getting poorer. In a world where war between nations is still likely at any time, or where careless treatment of the environment and plundering of resources bring about nature's revenge to the detriment of all. A world that allows some countries to continue with the scourge of child labour, or where basic education is reserved for the upper classes only! Most of our daily news could well turn you and me into pessimists, but I suggest we offer each-other a mutual, if late New Year's resolution! Instead of looking for the bad, let's look for the good news, which I believe we can find in the very first Christmas message, and when we have found it, let's try and live accordingly.

- Right now the people of Switzerland are busy composing a new constitution for the country, fair to all, which should ensure peace among 'our people'. I am glad to hear that the beginning words of that constitution are still; In the name of God ...!

In similar vein our 'individual constitution' may well be; let there be peace on earth, and let it begin with me...!
