National Bank, later the Bank of New Zealand. Swiss Marc he was called by his team, and his attention to detail was legendary.

Shortly after arriving in Wellington, Marc made contact with the Swiss Club and was told he was too young to join. Wait several years, was the advice of the Treasurer of the time. Undaunted, Marc did join, thinking to acquaint his and Jayne's children with his heritage, on the other side of the world. Emil, Alice and Oliver did join with Marc in club events, where there were, and are several families with children of a similar age.

Marc spoke English extra-ordinarily well, and went to a lot of effort to fit into the society into which he was surrounded. Wellington was his home, and he developed an acute understanding of New Zealand culture. His sense of humour was all his own.

Marc gained his scuba diver's licence, and he enjoyed sailing. One of his loves was the South Coast of Wellington; he loved taking his kids to the beach, regularly, an involved dad with his children, remembered for giving them the best hugs. He loved his children dearly, and Heather was also the love of his life. Heather was Marc's soulmate, and they had made plans. Wellington Swiss Club members have had the pleasure of meeting Heather at a number of events during the last year. Heather and Marc travelled to Switzerland in June and July last year, and spent five weeks there.

Remembering his father, Oliver says: "There is one star in my life who glimmers brighter than all the others; his name is Marc but I call him Papi. My dad has curly, brown, spring-like hair that bounces off the top of his head. He has a sunshiny smile that is filled with glistening white teeth, he normally wears a striped teeshirt that is coloured with shades of blue; his gushing aqua eyes twinkle like diamonds in the sky. My dad's voice is kind and friendly; it's happy, loud, large, heavy and sober all at the same time. When he laughs, his voice turns gleeful, and his eyes glow with joy."

Herbert John Schuler "Herb"

11 March 1929 – 16 August 2018

Herb was born on 11th March 1929, the eldest son, of Heribert (Harry) and Margaret (Maggie) Schuler (née Stirling). Herb was immensely proud of his Swiss ancestry, as well as the Scottish/Celtic connection he inherited from his mother's side. He was one of eight children.

Herb's Swiss roots go back to Blikensdorf, Baar, Canton Zug, Schweiz. His father Harry, then a young boy, and his older sister Josefina, who was newly married to Johan (Jack) Steiner emigrated to New Zealand on the German ship the Seydlitz, (embarking from Bremen, Germany, on 9th July 1909). Harry, aged 12, was not to return to his homeland until some fifty years later. Herb visited his ancestral homeland several times and his photographic memory for maps meant he could talk about his travels as if he had lived there. Two other members of the family Franz and Alouis Schuler later also emigrated to New Zealand. The Schuler family flourished there, with most keeping the Swiss culture and traditions alive through music, Jass (Swiss cards), language and food. Herb was an active member of the Hamilton Swiss Club.

Born in Te Aroha, Herb was raised on the family farm in Te Aroha West. Educated in Te Aroha, Herb had an enquiring mind and excelled at English, Maths and Science. His hopes of continuing his education at university did not eventuate as he was needed at home on the farm and left school at age 14, thus began his farming career. Married on 8th February 1958, Herb and Margaret purchased the dairy farm on McKinley Road from Herb's parents in 1964. Herb's parents, had purchased this original 100-acre block in Te Aroha West in 1937, settling there because (as the story goes) the view of the the Kaimai Range reminded Harry of his home in Switzerland. The 100 acres was a chunk of a larger holding which had been sub-divided into 100-acre blocks and sold off post-WW2. One of Herb's dreams was to purchase the other 100-acre blocks of land and re-instate these back to the original holding. His sons eventually helped realise Herb's dream, enabling sufficient holding for family succession.

Herb was truly a man of the land and had a passion for developing it. He continued to work well into his 70's, assisting his sons with the development of the McKinley Road farm. In the mid-1980's Herb and Margaret purchased a holiday house at Waihi Beach, where, for the next 35 years the family enjoyed many happy times. Herb was an avid handyman and gardener and right up until his death spent countless and hours happily tending the veggie patch, fruit trees, and kept the lawns, tanker tracks and roadsides manicured.

He and Margaret remained living on the McKinley Road farm, and this is where he passed away, suddenly (as was his wish). Herb is survived by his wife Margaret (née Slattery) and six children, 22 grandchildren, 3 great grandchildren. Herb was immensely proud of his children and their children, and made every effort to travel to watch their sports and other activities, right up until his death on 16th August 2018. The day before his passing Herb had driven himself and Margaret to visit their two little great-grandsons in Auckland. He was an active Grandad, keeping up with his grand-children's achievements, schooling and interests, and had a wonderful relationship with them.

Herb was known for ability to connect with people of all ages, was a man of great faith and exemplary values and never one to waste time on worrying. He was content and very much at peace with life, especially in his latter years.
