Acknowledgements

I am particularly grateful to Diane Conrad, who made an indispensable contribution to the success of this book with her indefatigable research, particularly on Johannes Badrutt senior, Johannes Badrutt junior and the Revd. Alfred B. Strettell. Furthermore, Mrs Conrad conducted additional research especially for this publication and, with great dedication, provided me with information and advice. She also kindly allowed us to print pictures from her publication entitled «Johannes Badrutt (1819–1889): Ich habe den schlaunen Moment benutzt – Ich wagte und es gelang», St. Moritz 2009, which would otherwise have been very difficult to find. I would also like to thank her husband Claudio Conrad for this.

I also received valuable information from my interview partners Sylvia Flury-Badrutt, Küsnacht, and Marcella Maier, St. Moritz, as well as Dr Hanspeter Danuser, St. Moritz, Dolf Kaiser, Zurich, Marco Knaus, New Zealand, and Jürg Pünter, St. Moritz.

I would also like to thank Pierre Badrutt, Filisur, Dr Leza Dosch, Chur, and the Revd. Robert Naefgen-Neubert, St. Peter-Pagig, for the information they provided on Johannes Badrutt senior.

Susan Barton, London, Ottavio Clavuot, Zernez, the Revd. Michael Landwehr, Samedan, Peter Märky, St. Moritz, Dr Bruno Meyer, Zug, Dr Walter Troxler, Birmensdorf and Beat Winterflood, Beringen, also provided me with numerous details. I would also like to convey my sincere thanks to them.

I am very grateful to Anita Köhl, Chur, Florio Pünter, St. Moritz, and Eduard Wolfensberger, Zurich, for many photographs from the family collections. To Rolf Canal, Samedan, I owe several photographs from old editions of the Engadin Express & Alpine Post newspaper. I also thank the St. Moritz photographer Olaf Küng for the photographs from the Badrutt family albums.

My heartfelt thanks also go to Bina Mästinger-Nikolay, Bottighofen, for the translations from Romansh and to Manuela Schürer, Ostermundigen, for the transcriptions.

Without the energetic support of Corina Huber and her team from the Dokumentationsbibliothek St. Moritz, many photo requests would have remained unfulfilled; a big thank you to them as well.

My heartfelt thanks furthermore go to Professor Beat Kleiner and his wife Dorothée Kleiner-Frick of the Museum of Swiss Hotels and Tourism, Zollikon, for their generous support in my search for unusual images.

I am obliged to Evelyne Lüthi-Graf and Graziella Borrelli of the Swiss Hotel Archives, Lausanne, for their pleasant cooperation.

I would like to thank the State Archives of Graubünden, the Graubünden Cantonal Library, the Upper Engadine Cultural Archives and the State Archives of the Canton of Zurich for various information they provided concerning the Badrutt family.

Also, I am very grateful to the Managing Director of the Association for Historical Research in Economics, Dr Bernhard Ruetz, for his critical and dedicated editing.

A special thanks goes to Toby Alleyne-Gee from Translingua for his cultivated translation, as well as once again to Diane Conrad who checked especially the chapters concerning Johannes Badrutt senior and Johannes Badrutt junior for content and correct translation from her expert's point of view with much engagement and diligence.

My heartfelt thanks also to Terry Späth for his very valuable advice and support concerning the remaining chapters. Last but not least I'd like to thank Peter Stierlin for his accurate proofreading.

They were the founders of the winter tourist season and made a decisive contribution towards creating the St. Moritz legend: the Badrutts, hotel pioneers from the Engadine. Over five generations, they wrote hotel history and came a long way – from a modest guest-house to the international luxury hotel Badrutt's Palace. For more than 100 years, the Palace has been the legendary meeting place for famous and successful personalities from all over the world. Through an extraordinary combination of hospitality, elegance and creativity, the Badrutt hotel dynasty has succeeded in attracting the most interesting guests – then and now.
