Louise Bourgeois The Insomnia Drawings

Insomnia has been a longtime-companion of Louise Bourgeois' night hours. Between November 1994 and June 1995, she has committed to paper whatever thoughts, memories, and images surfaced during her long sleepless nights. The resulting 220 drawings are the quintessence of all the impulses, sources, and motifs inspiring her work. The Insomnia Drawings show the artist's mind at work: drawings and sketches alternate with poems and aphorisms in both French and English, interspersed with laundry lists reminiscent of the hustle-bustle of everyday life. The series is a unique mirror of an extraordinary woman's life and work: beautiful, disquieting, passionate, inquiring, and imbued with a quirky sense of humor.

L'art/ou est/la vie,/toi et vous/inspire/unafraid: Art/est le/contraire/du acting

La nuit/à quoi penses-tu/pendant la nuit

Water is the/opposite of continuity/water can be the best but it can be worse//M is for mother/in the water/it is subject/to change/or even to reversal.

Louise Bourgeois

As soon as the artist agreed to entrust The Insomnia Drawings to the Daros Collection, Zurich, it was clear that this extraordinary work should be presented as a book. The result is a handsome slipcased two-volume publication. The first volume contains facsimiles of both the recto and verso of the 220 drawings. The second volume provides the reader with valuable background information on this complex and exhilaratingly beautiful work of art. Marie-Louise Bernadac, a leading Bourgeois scholar, places The Insomnia Drawings in the context of Bourgeois' oeuvre, providing biographical references for many notes, and pointing out the leitmotifs of Bourgeois' imaginary universe. In a lucid and beautifully written essay, Elisabeth Bronfen traces the nocturnal mysteries of insomnia and places this work of art in a larger cultural context. Furthermore, the second volume offers annotated transcriptions of all texts and notes. She presents herself as a lady-in-waiting, silent and patient, with the night promising to save her from the array of desires such as love, faith, faithlessness, tenacity, ambition, while her sleeplessness prevents any salvation from her psychic distress. If in these drawings and texts the night is metaphorically conceived of as an expanse of water that might engulf her, while sleep would restore her, insomnia is what prevents any voyage into inundation. (...) Because her insomnia brings states of ambivalence to the fore, she keeps returning to question of being suspended between two emotions—between plenitude and lack, proximity and absence, agreement and contradiction.—Elisabeth Bronfen

This landmark publication is a must for everyone wanting to take part in the imaginative journeys of one of today's most important artists.

Should you wish more information about this extraordinary book, which will be published in a deluxe, limited, and standard edition, please send an e-mail to: publishers@scalo.com!

Contemporary Art and Technology Biennial

September 2–October 31, 2000

Seoul, Korea

media_city seoul 2000

media_city seoul is an international biennial event—on view in museums and public venues throughout Seoul—that presents and explores the convergence of technology and the contemporary arts. The theme for the inaugural biennial, city: between 0 and 1, interprets the ways in which the digital revolution is transcending physical boundaries of space and time.

Jan van Eyck Akademie

The Jan van Eyck Akademie is an international post graduate centre for fine art, design and theory. Each department offers a programme directed towards both the individual work of participants and the possibility of linking it with other participants' work. The possibility to encounter practitioners from different areas, the wide variety of workshops, and the media and documentation centre create a unique set of conditions for a research-linked production.

The wealth of languages and of cultural backgrounds at the academy shapes the practice of translation as the modus operandi of the fine art department, focused on the performance of language in the digitized public space. Participants are expected to have an openness towards possibilities of an active presence in the fluid pattern of society. Translating such openness into an experimental post graduate research is not seen as a matter of working in more than one discipline, context or culture, but rather of letting the experience of thinking in one area and specific context play a role in another one.

Fine art | Design | Theory

Future fine art participants beginning a two year working period on 1 January 2001, are invited to apply.

For further information on the fine art, design or theory programme, or to request an application form, please contact Leon Westenberg, Jan van Eyck Akademie, Academieplein 1, 6211 KM Maastricht, Netherlands, www.janvaneyck.nl, t +31 (0)43 3503737, f +31 (0)43 3503799, e info@janvaneyck.nl

What can I tell serious art people about Las Vegas? Just this: you should not worry about it. Vegas is a nice town – bland as a biscuit in the sunshine, pastel and dreamy at the edges of the day, and the absolute, incarnate, dazzled heart of earthly promise under the stars. Dave Hickey

Art and advertising used to be happy together: she worked out her personal problems by making things, which kept her off the gin and looked chic in his office; he went out into the big wide world to earn enough of a crust to keep them both very comfortably, thank you.

James Roberts

Artists who still explore colour as their primary modus operandi often do so with the fervour of explorers moving into uncharted territory – without realising it's had an efficient bus system for years.

Jennifer Higgle

frieze contemporary art

It's hard to imagine how anthromorphic animals can not be sexualised: once a dog is wearing pants, it can get undressed.

Steven Stern

Today, the paradigm of the Net is changing art and its very different sibling – political utopian thought.

Diedrich Diederichsen

Forget the snoozy bumble of Bing Crosby and the glitzy hype of Sinatra. Nilsson's voice was the most versatile of his generation. Harry could scat like Cab Calloway. He could yodel like a Tyrolean milkmaid. His whistling put the birds to shame.

Matthew Gidley

Windowlicker: why does the windowlicker lick the window? Maybe the surface of whatever it is that art presents should be licked.

Bruce Hainley

frieze contemporary culture

The combination of colour and sound has proven itself to be the truly universal form of communication: in Close

Encounters, all social differences – even the ethnic divide between aliens and white middle-class Americans – are bridged and absorbed into something higher and sublime. Jörg Heiser
