WORLD SOCIOLOGY: CONTINUING DEBATES

In this issue, Alan Sica (Pennsylvania State University) proposes the last American contribution to our debate on the history of sociology. In the next issues, we hope to give a voice to European scholars. And François Chazel (University of Paris-Sorbonne) sheds new light on the matter of transaction.

INTERNATIONAL SOCIOLOGY

Edited by Roberto Cipriani University of Rome

'an excellent way of keeping in touch with the diverse currents of world sociology' - Immanuel Wallerstein

'one of the most unambiguously positive results of cultural globalization' - Jeffrey C Alexander

International Sociology was launched to transcend national boundaries, to enrich understanding of the discipline and to provide a global perspective on important issues of interest to sociologists throughout the world.

The journal draws together work of cross-cultural relevance from the international community of sociologists, focusing on fundamental issues of theory and method, and on new directions in empirical research. Articles come from all branches of the discipline and from all regions of the world.

International Sociology (0268-5809) is an official journal of the International Sociological Association

Quarterly: March, June, September, December
