Notes on Contributors

ANTOININA BEVAN ZLATAR holds a BA from the University of Oxford and a doctorate from the University of Geneva. She has been affiliated to the English Department of the University of Zurich since 2003. She is the author of Reformation Fictions: Polemical Protestant Dialogues in Elizabethan England (Oxford University Press, 2011) and is currently preparing a monograph titled “Making and Breaking Images in Milton’s England.” Research for the latter project was sponsored by a Swiss National Science Foundation award (Ambizione 2013-2015).

BRIAN CUMMINGS is Anniversary Professor at the University of York in the Department of English and Related Literature, and a Fellow of the British Academy. His books include Mortal Thoughts: Religion, Secularity and Identity in Shakespeare and Early Modern Culture (Oxford University Press, 2013), and an edition of The Book of Common Prayer: the Texts of 1549, 1559, and 1662, which appeared in Oxford World’s Classics in 2013. In 2012 he gave the Clarendon Lectures at Oxford University on “Bibliophobia.” With Alexandra Walsham (Cambridge) he is leading the three-year project “Remembering the Reformation,” funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council from 2016 to 2019.

ERZSI KUKORELLY is chargée d’enseignement at the University of Geneva. She studied at the London School of Economics and the University of Geneva, where she obtained a PhD with a study on the sequel to Samuel Richardson’s Pamela. She has published articles on eighteenth-century topics, ranging from Daniel Defoe’s representations of Africa to affective rhetoric in conduct books for young ladies. Together with colleagues from other faculties, she organises discussion seminars around topics linked to sustainability, such as urgency, vulnerability, and ambiguity.

ANDREW MORRALL is Professor and Chair of Academic Programs at the Bard Graduate Center, New York. His publications include: Jörg Breu the Elder. Art, Culture and Belief in Reformation Augsburg (Ashgate, 2002) and (with Melinda Watt) English Embroidery from The Metropolitan Museum of Art, 1580-1700: Twixt Art and Nature (Yale University Press, 2008) as well as numerous articles on aspects of Northern European Renaissance art and material culture, aesthetics, art and Reformation society, and the history of collecting.

SONIA PERNET is currently in her last year as a PhD Student in English Literature at the University of Lausanne. She is part of a Swiss National Science Foundation project on John Donne (1572-1631) named "Space, Place, and Image in the Prose and Poetry of John Donne," supervised by Dr. Kirsten Stirling. Her research focuses on Donne's sermons, more specifically on how Donne's fluid language and images create an encompassing space of encounter between God and Man in that they connect various essential aspects of the Christian faith, such as Creation, the Sacraments, and, of course, the ordinance of preaching in the Protestant Church.

KILIAN SCHINDLER is a doctoral candidate at the University of Fribourg and writing a dissertation on religious conflict, heresy, and persecution in early modern English drama. He is a contributor to a new critical edition of Sebastian Castellio's De haereticis an sint persequendi (1554).

OLGA TIMOFEEVA is Professor of English Historical Linguistics at the University of Zurich. She works on medieval language contact and language acquisition, historical sociolinguistics, and historical syntax. Her books include Non-finite Constructions in Old English, with Special Reference to Syntactic Borrowing from Latin (Helsinki: Société Néophilologique, 2010).

ALEXANDRA WALSHAM is Professor of Modern History at the University of Cambridge and a Fellow of Trinity College and the British Academy. She has published widely on the religious and cultural history of early modern Britain and her recent books include The Reformation of the Landscape: Religion, Identity and Memory in Early Modern Britain and Ireland (Oxford University Press, 2011) and Catholic Reformation in Protestant Britain (Ashgate, 2014). She is the recipient of a Leverhulme Major Research Fellowship for 2015-2018 and Principal Investigator of the Arts and Humanities Research Council "Remembering the Reformation" project (2016-2019).

CHRISTIANIA WHITEHEAD is a member of the Department of English and Comparative Literary Studies at the University of Warwick, and is currently also the senior research fellow on the research project funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNSF), "Region and Nation: Late Medieval Devotion to Northern English Saints," based at the University of Lausanne. She has published widely in the fields of religious allegory, devotional writing for women in Latin and Middle English, and northern sanctity, and has a new monograph forthcoming on the textual afterlife of St Cuthbert.

RACHEL WILLIE is Senior Lecturer in English Literature at Liverpool John Moores University. Her research focuses upon seventeenth century English literary history and culture. She is author of Staging the Revolution: Drama, Reinvention and History, 1647-72 (Manchester University Press, 2015; shortlisted for the University English Book Prize 2016) and co-editor with Kevin Killeen and Helen Smith of The Oxford Handbook of the Bible in Early Modern England, c. 1530-1700 (Oxford University Press, 2015).

HANNAH YIP is an Arts and Humanities Research Council funded PhD candidate at the University of Birmingham. Her doctoral thesis, under the supervision of Hugh Adlington and Tara Hamling, is provisionally entitled "Visual Elements of English Printed Sermons, c. 1500-c. 1660: Reading, Religious Politics and Iconography."

NICOLETTE ZEEMAN is Professor of Medieval and Renaissance English in the Faculty of English at King's College and the University of Cambridge. Author of Piers Plowman and the Medieval Discourse of Desire (Cambridge University Press, 2006), she contributed to and co-edited with Jean Michel Massing King's College Chapel 1515-2015. Art, Music and Religion in Cambridge (Harvey Miller, 2014), and with Dallas Denery II and Kantik Ghosh Uncertain Knowledge. Scepticism, Relativism, and Doubt in the Middle Ages (Brepols, 2014). Her next monograph is Arts of Disruption. Conflict and Contradiction in Medieval Allegory and Piers Plowman; she is also developing a project on ideas about idolatry in later medieval culture, provisionally entitled Caught in the Body.
