SWISS INSTITUTE.

LECTURE on the EUROPEAN SITUATION by G. P. GOOCH, Esq., M.A

On the 2nd March Mr. Gooch delivered his lecture on "The European Situation," which was eagerly followed by a numerous audience, and was, like last year's lecture, immensely appreciated by everybody present. To do the lecturer justice, we cannot do better than again give a verbatim report of his lecture, and at the same time give those of our computient where neuroparted for attending or nis fecture, and at the same time give those of our compatriots who were prevented from attending an opportunity of benefitting by this unbiassed sur-vey of present-day European history. Much to our regret, His Excellency the Swiss Minister was prevented by an official function from taking the Chair at the meeting.

Mr. Gooch said:-

Ladies and Gentemen.—It is always a pleasure to the Swiss and Gentemen.—It is always a pleasure to the Swiss Institute. I am going to give you a lecture on the same subject to-night as I gave here a year ago of Europe is fluid; the lines are farwn on the many-but they are not drawn yet in the hearts of men. The situation, taken as a whole, is even more fluid to-day they are not drawn yet in the hearts of men. The situation taken as a whole, is events, and the events they are not time to cover the whole map of Europe. Thore not time to cover the whole map of Europe of the problem, and I shall begin to-night, as I began take. Russi first. The position of the Bolshevist Gövernment is stron-strong with the sast End of Europe, and I will take Russi first. The position of the Bolshevist Gövernment is stron-first problem, and Parne or England, but recognition that no sussia on the whole is a little better than freat Powers of Europe, the Bolshevist Government and the same sussia on the whole is a strong the popen the open the same the same the same the same the open the same the same the same the same situation has come nearer. I daresay you have noticed phow an increasing willingness time, in certain cases there and the Prench people and the French Government have hated Bolshevism even more than the English Moscow before we do. I repeat, therefore, thay they the French people and the French Government have hated Bolshevism even more than the English Moscow before we do. I have even you have notice Bolshevism Government would merely be the dusting the the general particitation of the Russian And from most Liberals on the ground that the recognition of the Russian Government seems to note nearer langer the demand for the recognition of the Russian And Russia and form most Liberals on the general particitation of the result of the Russian Government is conduct to recognition the the Russian for the recognition to the Russian And the pressure also comes from those whole in guast and the pressure also comes from those

a year after the signing of the Treaties, the Poles, getting impatient, annexed Eastern Galica and have remained in military occupation of it ever since, and even to-day, four and a half years after the Great War, the victorious Allies have not yet decided the future destiny of Eastern Galicia, which, I repeat, was occu-pied by Poland, but was never given to them by international law and right. So much for Eastern Galicia, where, I regret to say, the relations between the Ruthenes and Poles are extremely bad, and, far from Eastern Galicia being a source of strength to Poland, it is a source of weakness. Now let us come to the porth of Data a spurce of sirengin to Poland, it is a source on "Now".

Tas come to the north of Poland, and we come then to the problem of Lithuania. Lithuania, sy our know, was an independent kingdom, and in the 14th century Lithuania and Poland became united by a royal matriage, the heiress of Poland marrying that century the end of the 18th century, when Polish Lithuania and the larger part of Poland were swallowed put by Katerine the Great. Since then they formed part of Russia. After the war it was quite clear that were so to mappen to Lithuania. The Lithuanians wanted to be an independent State, as they had been in the Middle Ages. We were not at all sure that the Russian Government would recognize Lithuania as an independent State, because it had was a mere patch on the map. What did the Poles want? They wanted Lithuania to be infoct point both been swallowed up by Kussia. Now, that provided a most of the Poland, are both been swallowed up by Russia. Now, that provided a most of the other organic part of Poland, are lithuania to be infoct point both been swallowed up by Russia. Now, that provided a most of the other organic part of the city is Poland were pointed together on Polish on the ground—which is correct—that the greater part of the city is Poland's most celebrated sons. Koszinsko, for one, the great here of the Lithuanian the try viersity of Vilna has always been a Polish University, that some of Poland's most celebrated sons. Koszinsko, for one, the great here of the the pole cont of Vilna erts and the pole of the worst things between these of the problem, has been one of the worst things the poles out of Vilna erts and the pole of the worst things when has papened. The lengenous plan, put forward by a committee of the League of Nations, by which there ever the sol and refuse the try in Poland has made it clear that there is not going the three were structure of the problem, has been one of the worst things by the Poles out of Vilna erts and the fast of the problem is unite enolay t

I want the Smyrma Zone—we gave ith him. 'I want Thrace'' we did now going to lell you what I want. I want the Sing the Singer Singer that the League of Nations has at last taken up the burden of looking to and helping the little Austrian Republic. I come naturally from Austria to Czecho-Slovakia. I said last year in this room that, if I were an insurance office. I would give better terms to Czecho-Slovakia than to any other of the new States--cheaper terms than to Poland, Jugoslavia or Roumania. I say so still. They have their difficulties, and one is the fact that they have got such a lot of people in their State who are neither Czechs nor Slovaks. There are about three million Germans, four million Hungarians, half a million Ruthenes from the southern side of the Carpathians, and there are also over two million Slovaks who, although closely connected by blood and language with the Czechs, are very different people. They are agricul-ural, clerical, conservative in their sympathies, whereas the Czechs, who really dominate the new State, are in-dustrial, radical and largely Socialist. I think the great danger with Slovakia is that it is so big and contains so many foreign and unadjustable elements within its boundaries. Italy, as you know, has passed through a most interesting experience—the rise of Fascismo and the seizing of power by Mussolini. We know very well that the whole face and aspect of Italian politics has been changed suddenly. Italy, before Mussolini, was not governed; now it is over-governed. Before Musso-lini some thought there was so much liberty that the authority of the State had almost ceased to exist, and that is what the Fascisti thought; they thought that the state had abdicated its authority, and that is why they came along and determined to exercise their authority, defend the army, property and the bourgeoisie against what they considered, rightly or wrongly, to

Some people say we are going back to the policy which we followed before 1903, the policy of what Lord Goschen called "splendid isolation." They say there are only two policies for England, one is, the policy of isolation, and the other the policy of European commit-ments. I believe there is a third. I am personally opposed to European entanglements or commitments for our country, but I am clearly opposed also to a policy of splendid isolation. We are more intimately connected with the young life of Europe to-day than we were in the nineteenth century, and, what is much more important, we are now members of the League of Nations, and, as such, have responsibilities apper-taining to a great Empire: we have a responsibility to Europe as a whole which we must not neglect, and therefore I say, now that the Entente is dead, instead of going back to the policy of splendid isolation and standing aloof from the life of Europe, we must push forward. We must keep ourselves free from one-sided commitments to any one Continental Power or group of Powers. On the other hand, we must of the life of Europe as a whole, and perhaps as the most important members of the League of Nations, im-portant not alone as to wealth, but also by our convic-tions, bound to take our share in the reconstruction and pacification of Europe.

Gymnastic Society "Schweizerbund."

Seldom, or, at any rate, not for many years, has the Gymnastic Society "Schweizerbund" shown it-Settom, or, at any rate, not for many years, has the Gymnastic Society "Schweizerbund" shown it-self to better advantage than it did last Saturday, March 10th, in a Gymnastic Display at 74, Char-lotte Street. Seldom, also, have they faced an audience who showed more appreciation. I heartily congratulate their leader, Mr. W. Ehrler, and the Organising Committee on their success. The gym-nastic features of the display showed that there is talent and good material, which, if made use of in the proper way, should increase individual capa-bility considerably, and if the members of the Club will now only keep together and show the same enthusiasm as their leader, we may expect to see last Saturday's performance eclipsed before long. The voluntary exercises on the horizontal and the parallel bars were executed in fine style, and although Bader, Nussle, Bertschinger and others showed us some of the advanced work, I personally consider that especially the beginners (and there

Therefore cultivate young talent and turn it into champions in time. To comment on exercise would take too long. each

An item very much appreciated was the wrestling (Swiss style) exhibition, thoroughly well displayed by R. Schmied and E. Schmied. It seemed most easy to copy them after their very excellent show, although some of us should prefer to be on top instead of underneath, when the fall measures some three or four feet. The pyramids, both on the parallel bars and others, made me envy the nerve possessed by some fellows. All my criticism can be put into one word: "Brave1" In order to vary the programme, the organisers did well to secure the services of Misses Fieldhouse, Rushworth and Hutchinson, who delighted the audience with songs and sketches, which caused orars of laughter. They were in two instances assisted by the trio, consisting of Messrs. Nussle, Brunner and Weber; these latter also acted a scene, entitled "Cinema Sketch," that caused great mirth. The feature of the evening, however, was un-doubtedly the "Tableaux Vivants," which repre-sented historic events which took place in Switzer-land hundreds of years ago. The actors for this item excelled themselves, and with the aid of a small searchlight the groups appeared as if they were white marble. I cannot praise this perform-ance too much, knowing full well how many drops of perspiration it must have cost the leader to arrange these tableaux. Every one who has scen if will agree with me, and those who did not see it missed something attractive. The success of the evening was further aug-mented by the presence of many old friends and sympathisers, who, although they enjoyed them-selves extremely well, passed their opinion on many little things which could have been improved upon and which luckily, however, were only visible to such expert eyes as theirs. Among the guests we found Mr. R. Oberholzer, who helped to found the Gymnastic Society 34 years ago; Mr. Rabe, a well-known captain and leader of former days; Messrs. Wetter, Hehl, De Brunner, Sermier, Delaloy, Boehringer, Isler and Manzoni, who gave the even-ing an appearance of importance, while their pre-sence encouraged the younger generation to their supreme efforts. Many little speeches during the intervals were made, short but sweet, and therefore appreciated. A word may also be said for Mr. Lampert, who appreciated.

A word may also be said for Mr. Lampert, who devised and supervised the light effects for the pyramids and tableaux, in addition to personally taking part in the tableaux. CHARLES STUDER. The above report has been kindly sent to us by Mr. Charles Studer, who, needless to say, took a very prominent part in the display, his exhibition on the horizontal bar being the gala exercise of the evening. Mr. Studer subsequently addressed the gathering, stating that if the many young Swiss in London who are fond of gymnastics would only communicate with the Secretary of this society, 74, Charlotte Street, W. 1, our Colony would be able to boast of as large and important a gymnastic society as the one in Paris. He was very delighted to say that the two gymnastic sections of the Schweizerbund and the Union Helvetia were already pulling together, and he thought he could predict an early trip to Switzerland in order to take part in a Federal Competition. However, the difficulties of such a venture were very great, and he appealed to every young Swiss to come forward with his support. He had no doubt that the two clubs con-cerned would be ready to give special facilities to those who were not members, but were keen to attend the gymnastic practices that were held every Wednesday and Friday. Wednesday and Friday.
