OFFICES
OF THE SWISS INDUSTRIES FAIR

Managing Director: Dr. W. MEILE.

GENERAL. The Swiss Industries Fair is the direct descendant of the ancient Fair which has been held in Basle, at varying intervals, ever since the 15th Century. The Fair is essentially Swiss in character.

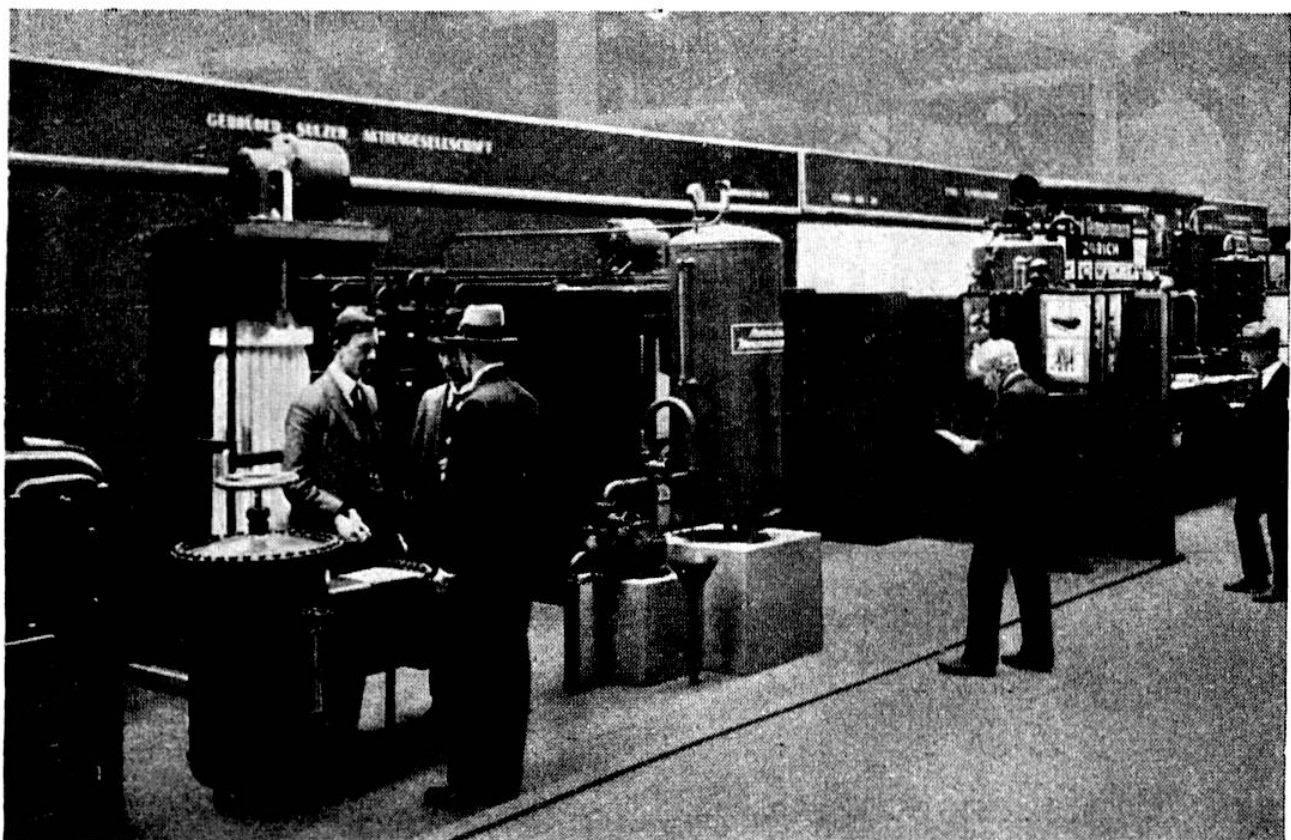

The total destruction by fire of the Fair buildings necessitates the erection of new buildings. The 1924 exhibition will accordingly be held on the 17th—27th May 1924

SITUATION. Basle has, from time immemorial, been a great commercial centre and is specially fitted to be the home of the Swiss Industries Fair, lying as it does on the very borders of Switzerland, within easy reach of two adjoining countries. It has the advantage of being a great international railway junction, served by numerous express trains from every part of Europe. Moreover, Basle has recently completed the building of a harbour on the Rhine, lending additional importance to the town as a commercial, industrial and banking centre.

IMPORTANCE OF THE FAIR. Founded on a solid basis, the Swiss Industries Fair has rapidly developed into an important commercial enterprise, the advantages of which are being appreciated more and more in business circles. The progress of the Fair, since it was reorganised on the present lines in 1917, has been constant, visitors being attracted from all parts of the world. This is illustrated by the fact that representatives of no less than 21 foreign countries visited the 7th Industries Fair, held in 1923. Its object is to promote the sale of Swiss products in the home markets and to encourage exports. It plays a prominent part in fostering international trade relations, ranking among the most important of all Fairs and Exhibitions of a similar nature. Foreign traders are able to cover their requirements to their entire satisfaction.

ORGANISATION. Unfortunately, as the result of a disastrous fire, the hitherto provisionally erected Fair buildings were almost wholly destroyed, rendering necessary the erection of new buildings of a more substantial nature for the next Fair. Products and articles of the same class are grouped together. This with a view to assist traders to form a complete idea of the exhibits in the shortest possible time. It has been the special aim of the management to provide for foreign buyers every facility tending to assist them in the transaction of their current business. Special private offices are at their disposal for their business interviews, where they may conduct their correspondence and obtain the services of trained shorthand typists and interpreters. A FOREIGN INFORMATION BUREAU is open in the Fair for their benefit. / The Manager of the Swiss Industries Fair at Basle will also, at all times, be pleased to give information, free of charge, regarding Swiss Manufacturers.
