scythe. Houses standing yards away from the water, strong enough to withstand a severe earthquake, were just gradually undermined, and then there was a rumbling, a few cracks, and where a minute before they had stood there was nothing but—a surging yellow vortex. In such moments we feel our own littleness. I have seen fires, have experienced earthquakes, but the grandest, the most imposing sight, is the mountain water in revolt. Autumn is here again. A few more weeks and winter will call. This is the time when some of the younger members of the Swiss Colony, in common with part of the younger generation of most nations, replace their tennis rackets by books. I do not know how many of you take to study and how many to dances. But this question is quite irrelevant. What I want is simply to offer a word of advice to those who have not yet quite decided.

It is, I think, not as well known as it might be, that we who live in or near London are very fortunate so far as educational facilities are concerned. I am speaking particularly of the student who has to earn his livelihood. As next week the term opens at the University of London, and as some of the Polytechnics have already started their winter programmes, I thought I might mention the matter to-day. There is still time to start any of the courses, and if any one would like to know more before next Saturday, please write me at once; I shall be pleased to help. But, with the Editor's permission, I shall revert to this matter in my next week's letter. I really think our young folk should take more advantage of the good things offered—and probably would if they knew more about it.

Hoping that your coal cellars are all well filled and that someone will in time think of you and present you with a new pair of "Endfinke," I remain, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Yours sincerely, JOHN HENRY.

To the Editor of the Swiss Observer,
27th Sept., 1927.

DEAR SIR,—For months past the British Public has been thrilled by more or less exaggerated news of various disasters said to have happened in Switzerland. The Daily Express is the chief culprit in this respect, and its Geneva Correspondent does not seem to have the faintest notion of the extent of Switzerland, nor of the surrounding territories.

When a railway disaster took place somewhere near Chamonix, it was published in that paper under the heading "Swiss Railway Disaster."

When a slight earth-tremor took place in the Grisons, the Daily Express wrote of British visitors fleeing from the Engadine, panic-stricken!

To-day fourteen persons are said to have been killed by a railway accident in Switzerland, although the scene of the accident is in the now Italian Tyrol!

I have hoped in vain for our Swiss authorities to move in the matter and to point out these errors. Anything more calculated to harm the Swiss Tourist Industry it would be difficult to imagine, than just such erroneous statements in widely-read British newspapers. It may be, of course, that the Canadian-owned Daily Express wishes British Tourists to spend their money in Canada.

However, what about it? Have we no Swiss Government Representatives over here who could use their influence to stop such practices?

I acknowledge that a faint—oh, so faint—denial that such an accident took place in Switzerland appeared some weeks ago in the columns of the Swiss Observer. But something much stronger is needed. Hence my using up some of my time for writing to you.

With kind regards, always sincerely yours,
KIBURG.

VACANCIES IN SWITZERLAND.

At the request of the Federal Labour Office (Eidgen. Arbeitsamt, 8, Bundesgasse, Bern) we are publishing, at regular intervals, lists of special vacancies in Switzerland for which suitable candidates are not available at home. Whilst it is intended to fill these vacancies, whenever possible, with Swiss from abroad, applications are considered for foreigners possessing the necessary qualifications. Offers, stating date of publication and reference number, should be addressed to the Swiss Consulate in whose district the applicant resides, and will then be forwarded to the proper quarter in Switzerland. We publish the list in the original text as received from the Labour Office.
