THE EDITOR'S POST-BAG.

Dear Sir,—I have to thank you for sending me the Swiss Observer, and I fully appreciate your plea that one Swiss should support another, especially in a foreign country.

However, how can you expect me to support my compatriots when they do not support me?

As an example I only beg to state that in this small town of 50,000 inhabitants there are Swiss who would a thousand times rather support my English competitors than me, their compatriot, yet my goods are recognised to be the best obtainable in the town and my prices are exactly the same as those of my competitors! Is that the spirit of the Rütli? Take the French, the Italians and many other foreigners who stick together like leeches and get on through this very policy!

The next time you send your very fine publication out at random please do not forget to remind the Swiss readers to support one another and you will be doing an excellent service to many Swiss tradesmen in this country.

Yours respectfully, H.S.

We gladly publish the above communication as an apt illustration of what the Swiss Observer has recently been preaching on several occasions regarding the importance of all the members of our Colony supporting and patronising each other's business ventures. We refuse, however, to believe in the statement that any one of us "would a thousand times rather support the English competitors" of a compatriot of ours. The main reasons why the enterprises of our compatriots do not get, as a rule, as much patronage within our Colony as might be are surely only ignorance of the existence of Swiss shops or works, forgetfulness and considerations of convenience. All three reasons can be counteracted to a considerable degree. An excellent means—and the only practicable one—for reminding our compatriots of the existence of any Swiss enterprise are advertisements and announcements in the Swiss Observer. Our correspondent, therefore, has a partial remedy in his own hands. Repeated, though small, advertisements should certainly bring him the custom of our compatriots in his locality. He would at the same time help the Swiss Observer to continue its campaign to the same effect. We could, indeed, learn a good deal from other foreign colonies in England regarding the extent to which convenience can and ought to be put aside for the benefit of the business of a compatriot. We think that our correspondent ought not, in the name of the "spirit of the Rütli" make his support of compatriots directly dependent on support received from others.

Sir,—She or he who writes for the public, or speaks in public, invites criticism. So be it.

As long as the criticism is couched in decent language, is free from persiflage and bears some semblance to logic, it must be accepted, but only from an author who disdains covertness!

The "Old Friend of the S.O." cannot have read my article concerning the Boy Scouts with a clear sense of understanding, neither did he consult it when he wrote his animadversion in the last issue of the Swiss Observer.

I will gladly leave it to the judgment of your readers, whether this "friend's" adverbs and his befogged presumptions, can be the result of reasonable deduction and logical inference.

It is a debatable question whether in a case of this description the Editor of the S.O. should have taken this "old friend" under his protective cloak.

N.B.—"Tosh" is not mentioned or defined in Nuttall's nor in Webster's Dictionary of the English Language, perhaps interested readers will find it at Public Libraries in books where slang terms are collected for the enlightenment of the ignorant. Yours etc., O.J.W.

We have shown the above fierce rejoinder to our correspondent "An old friend of the S.O.", who replies as follows:

Sir,—Although I do not think I deserve it quite so richly for not disclosing my name (in order to exclude all purely personal recriminations) I must accept this lesson in good manners, logic and linguistic purism. The Concise Oxford Dictionary does, by the way, contain the slang term objected to. I note with satisfaction that my contention re Boy Scouts visit stands.

"Still an old friend of the S.O."

The Untidy English.

A former member of the Sheffield City Council who has just returned from a holiday at Lucerne tells me that all the notices posted up thereabout are printed in three languages, German, English and French.

"But," he added, "the notices printed on the receptacles for rubbish, such as cigarette and chocolate cartons, are printed only in one language, and that language is English."

I suppose that the inference is that it is only the English who are untidy enough to need such requests making to them.
