When in 1842 the Swiss National Choir Association was founded in Aarau, 500 men repre-Association was founded in Aarau, 500 men represented about a dozen of men's choirs. Now this Association counts over 200 choirs with 15,000 members, of whom at least 13,000 will attend the Festival at Basle shortly. It will not be easy to lodge these visitors in the old Rhine city, which only possesses 1,800 hotel beds. The large concert hall of the Industries Fair of Basle can seat 10,000 persons, which is a great advantage for such functions. such functions.

The opening concert will prove of special interest. Haendel's "Alexander's Feast, or the Power of Music" will be followed by a performance of a Festival Play "Motherland," by Dr. Karl Weber, set to music by Walter Müller. The societies will compete in 4 categories, in three of which the song or hymn is only handed to the choir one hour before the performance. In the fourth category such difficult pieces as Schubert's "Salve Regina" and Wagner's Parsifai choirs are demanded are demanded.

One of the older choirs, entering these competitions, already existed in 1620 m St. Gall. The great activity and numerous compositions of Hans Georg Naegeli, in Zürich, a hundred years ago, gave a mighty impetus to choral song in Switzerland, and many men's choirs were founded in those times. A special Swiss feature is the fact, that their National Choir Association was fact, that their National Choir Association was formed "in order to add a stone to the temple of Swiss Unity and National feeling." Ever since its foundation, the festivals, which are held once in 6 or 7 years, have been regarded as patriotic demonstrations of true Democracy, where all classes of the people, all the four languages as well as all political and religious parties and groupments are visibly united in the name of Music.

THE SNOW-LINE AS THE BOUNDARY FOR AGRICULTURE.

It is a curious fact that the snow-line, even It is a curious fact that the show-line, even in such a small country as Switzerland, varies very much. By snow-line we mean the boundary-line separating the Alps from cultivated or at least arable land. In the Silvretta region of the Grisons the snow-line is at 2,700 metres above sea-level, in the Bernese Oberland at 2,900 m. and in the Canton of Valais on an average as high as 2,100 metres. 3,100 metres.

3,100 metres.

The tree-line generally reaches a height of 1,750 m, on the northern side of the Alps, yet in the Bernese Oberland it is mostly at a height of 1,830 m, in the Valais at 2,200-2,300 metres, so that rye is still grown there at 2,000m, while cembra-pines and larches are still found at 2,500 m, above sea-level. In the Münster Valley (Grisons) barley is grown at 1,900 m. Potatoes and various kinds of vegetables are grown in the Engadine, and the hostelries of the Bernina and of the Great St. Bernard (2,400 m.) have their cabbage gardens. And one marvels at the pluck of the vine in the Valais and Ticino cantons, where it flourishes and ripens at heights of 1,000 and 1,200 metres above sea-level.
