EDITOR'S POSTBAG.

The Editor,
Dear Sir,

I beg to enclose cutting from yesterday's "Daily Express" commenting on William Hickey's "somewhat burlesque" report of the Paravicini-Maugham Wedding. —

Where was your Society Reporter whose vivid descriptions of Swiss Functions are always a delight to read, that you had to rely on an Americanised vulgarity for a report in the Swiss Observer. —

And is a Wedding really an object for Satire?

An Old Reader.—

"Daily Express" 25.7.36.

For the supreme effort in — journalism, commend me to your account by William Hickey (21.7.36) of the Paravicini-Maugham wedding, which is described in a style that cannot be called otherwise than a mixture of vulgarity, bad grammar, and a "upper ten" at the working classes.

How this self-advertised product or our so-called public school education managed to kick off his patter with a sentence joining the words "today yesterday" beats my conception of the King's English.

L. FAULKNER KING,

"Best looking bride and groom of the month, said What's On To-day yesterday," is phrase sneerer King objects to. Seems quite unambiguous to us; but then we also thought Hickey's column particularly good that day. Satire always passes some people by." — Ed. D. E.
