FEDERAL.

SWITZERLAND'S DEFENCE PLAN.

The Swiss Federal Government authorised the Ministry of Defence immediately to construct 40 military aeroplanes at a cost of £340,000. The decision was taken in view of the political tension in Europe.

The "Basler National-Zeitung" reveals that the aeroplanes will have a maximum speed of 212 m.p.h., and will be superior to the newest types of Fokker bombers.

The general defence debate was concluded at Berne. The Government has entrusted the Ministry of Defence with the drawing up of a scheme for general improvement of Switzerland's defences, especially the mechanised divisions of the army and artillery.

Special attention will also be devoted to strengthening the frontier fortifications. It is estimated that the expenditure on armaments, to be spread over a number of years, will amount to about £16,300,000.

It is proposed to raise £6,600,000 by floating a special defence loan at between 2½ to 3 per cent. interest. The scheme will be submitted to the Federal Parliament.

SWISS NATIONAL BANK.

During the last week of March the gold reserves of the Swiss National Bank increased by 11,500,000fr. and reached 1,508,000,000fr. on March 31st, while the bank-note circulation amounted to 1,318,000,000fr. On March 31st the gold reserves represented 87.41 per cent. of all the engagements of the Bank.

LEU AND CO'S BANK.

It is announced that Leu and Co.'s Bank, of Zurich, one of Switzerland's "Big Seven," had been granted a fresh moratorium, which will remain in force until the end of October next.

The bank first announced its difficulties at the beginning of this year, and as a result, was granted a moratorium for three months.

It had been generally expected that the administrative council of the bank would have been able to reorganise the institution during the first quarter of this year, but it has evidently been unable to do so.

MISS HERMINE SCHUMOWSKA +.

Miss Hermine Schumowska, formerly a well-known actress, died some days ago at Thalwil, near Zurich, at the age of 67. She was born a Croatian, but was a descendant of an old Viennese family named Waldherr, who came to Zagreb. Her rare and brilliant dramatic talent brought great success to her on the stages of the Croatian National Theatre at Zagreb, the Schiller Theatre in Berlin, and the Zurich Stadt-theatre, especially in prominent rôles in the dramatic works of Schiller, Sudermann, and Hauptmann, and some English authors. For a long time she lived in Switzerland at Zurich, where she was most popular. She was a leader in society life, and earned much gratitude as a benefactor of the poor.

SWISS GLACIERS RETREATING.

The latest measurements made by experts of the Swiss Glacier commission indicate that almost 90% of the country's glaciers, especially in the Valais, are still retreating. A marked decrease has been registered without interruption since 1921. Glaciologists are of the opinion that there will be no change in these tendencies until 1940. The most recent forward march of the

NEW HIGH-SPEED TRAINS.

The sum of 1,250,000 Swiss francs has been added to the 1936 budget of the Swiss Federal Railways to cover the cost of two streamlined, light-weight, three-car electric trains for very fast services on certain main lines. These trains will seat about thirty second-class and 130 third-class passengers, and will have a maximum speed of 93 m.p.h.

UNE COMMISSION PERMANENTE DES AFFAIRES ÉTRANGÈRES.

L'un des serpents de mer de la politique fédérale, — car il y en a plusieurs — c'est incontestablement la commission permanente des affaires étrangères. Sa tête bisonne est réapparue au-dessus des flots, au cours de la séance que la commission du National pour la S. D. N. a tenue récemment à Montreux.

Cette commission, que M. Henry Vallotton préside avec beaucoup de tact et d'autorité, a entendu M. le conseiller fédéral Motta et a examiné plusieurs des problèmes les plus actuels, touchant la défense de notre souveraineté et de notre neutralité.

Puis le serpent de mer a montré sa crête. Il s'agit d'une proposition Grimm, qui a déjà été à plusieurs reprises, notamment l'an dernier, l'objet de divers commentaires. Dans une de ses récentes, et d'ailleurs toujours intéressantes interventions parlementaires, le député socialiste bernois s'est efforcé de mettre en évidence les avantages de ce conventionnel de la politique extérieure. A l'époque, le représentant du Conseil fédéral ne paraissait guère enthousiaste pour cette innovation.

Celle-ci avait du reste un peu l'aspect du vieux neuf. Voici de longues années que l'on parle de prêter, au chef du département politique, l'aide d'un organe qui, malheureusement, risque fort de ressembler au sabre de M. Prudhomme, destiné à défendre les institutions et, au besoin, à les combattre. Mais, chose curieuse, les paladins de la commission des affaires étrangères se recrutaient jadis dans le centre libéral; et nul n'ignore que ce fut un dada du regretté Frédéric de Rabours.

La politique extérieure a ceci d'agréable que à en croire beaucoup de gens, elle ne suppose aucune compétence. Tout le monde ne se hasarderait pas à entreprendre la construction d'un pont, à fabriquer une pendule, à tailler un habitat — fût-ce une simple veste électorale — ou à lever des plans sur le terrain. Mais tout le monde vous explique que M. Mussolini a tort de faire cela, que M. Eden aurait dû dire ça, et peut dévoiler, au café, entre deux bocks, devant un complaisant auditoire, les secrets des chancelleries et les dessous inavoués des chefs d'Etat.

"Si j'étais à la place de M. Motta" ... Il y a un peu de cette vanité candide dans le cas des députés qui veulent absolument participer à la direction d'une politique extérieure, pourtant rétante, chez nous, à ce que commande la nécessité, les audacieux coups de diplomatie n'étant guère dans nos moyens.

Mais, justement, il n'est pas absolument certain que le bien du pays réclame le concours actif du parlement dans la conduite de négociations, délicates par leur nature même, et qui doivent demeurer à l'abri des indiscretions et de l'agitation intempestive. Au surplus, les rapports avec l'étranger sont, en vertu de la constitution, la tâche du pouvoir exécutif, c'est-à-dire du Conseil fédéral, les Chambres étant, cela va sans dire, tenues au courant de tout ce qui doit être soumis à leur approbation. On ne saurait reprocher à M. Motta d'avoir jamais manqué à les renseigner avec toute la précision désirée.

Dans ces conditions, on sera peut-être surpris de lire que le représentant du Conseil fédéral ne s'est pas opposé à l'institution de la commission en question, si le parlement le souhaite. C'est que, en définitive, il s'agirait maintenant d'un organe purement consultatif, que le Conseil fédéral convoquerait lui-même "selon les besoins;" autant dire, quand il le jugerait à propos. De la sorte, les inconvénients en seraient notablement diminués. Les commissaires ne se substituerait pas au gouvernement, ni ne soumettraient celui-ci à une manière de tutelle, pour les affaires étrangères. Le rouage nouveau pourrait rendre des services, en établissant une liaison entre le Conseil fédéral et la représentation nationale. Au cours de certaines périodes critiques, où l'opinion est prompte à s'alarmer, l'effet ne serait peut-être pas mauvais. Mais on n'en sera sûr qu'à l'expérience.

Puisque M. Motta, et sans doute ses collègues avec lui, ne s'opposent pas à cette création, nous aurions tort de nous montrer plus royalistes que le roi.
