LA POLITIQUE.

Vers l'assainissement des C. F. F.

Lundi s'est réunié, à Lugano, sous la présidence de M. Gaffner, agraire bernois, la commission du Conseil national chargée d'examiner le projet de réorganisation des C. F. F. M. Pilet-Golaz, conseiller fédéral, chef du département des transports, assiste aux délibérations, qui dureront toute la semaine. D'ores et déjà, l'on peut dire qu'une grande bataille va s'engager. L'opinion aurait grand tort de se désintéresser de ces discussions, préalables aux débats qui s'ouvriront plus tard devant les Chambres, car le sort même de la réforme va dépendre de la position que prendront les partis et de la résistance que leurs représentants sauront ou ne sauront pas opposer à des tentatives démagogiques très apparentes. Il est donc bon que le public soit renseigné sur ce qui se prépare et puisse au besoin s'insurger contre un essai éventuel de sabotage.

En effet, les socialistes et leurs alliés feront une opposition systématique, non point tant contre telle ou telle disposition spéciale du projet (lequel, du reste, et de l'avenir de ses auteurs, peut être amendé ici ou là, sans que l'œuvre même de la réorganisation soit compromise), mais bien contre l'idée de toucher au statut du personnel.

Que la commission, dans son ensemble, veuille inclure la révision dudit statut dans la réorganisation, c'est tout de même fort probable. Mais la proposition de "scinder" les deux objets sera certainement reprise, et l'on n'hésitera point à créer quelque agitation autour de cette question de procédure, à la vérité très importante. Sous prétexte de ne pas compromettre l'essentiel du projet, les tacticiens de l'extrême-gauche, toujours habiles, suggèrent et suggéreront de consulter le peuple séparément sur les deux points. Si, disent-ils, la révision du statut trouve grâce devant les citoyens, eh bien! tant mieux pour vous. Si, en revanche, elle est repoussée, il ne faudrait pas que cet échec entraînât celui de toute l'affaire. Mais le calcul secret de ceux qui tiennent ce raisonnement, c'est naturellement de rendre ainsi le statut intangible. Manifestement, le peuple veut de profonds changements aux C. F. F. Si on lui présente un seul et unique projet, comprenant entre autres la révision du statut du personnel, il y a des chances pour qu'il accepte le tout. Mais si l'on sépare ce qui concerne le statut, il pourra fort bien voter le principe de l'assainissement et repousser la révision du statut.

Le Conseil fédéral, et en particulier le chef du département des chemins de fer, estime que ses propositions ne pourraient pas être efficaces au cas où la disjonction serait admise. Chacun sait que le réseau national doit être "commercialisé;" ses organes doivent joindre d'une liberté d'action plus grande, mais de cette liberté elle ne pourra faire bon usage que si toutes les conditions pour qu'elle devienne et demeure saine sont remplies. Si l'on devait céder sur la question du statut — et pour obtenir cette concession, M. Bratschi mettra en jeu toutes les ressources de sa rhétorique et de sa stratégie — le but poursuivi ne saurait être atteint; en particulier, tout le plan d'amortissements serait compromis et les sacrifices déjà lourds demandés à la Confédération se trouveraient insuffisants.

Cela soit dit sans oublier les préceptes d'équité qui doivent guider les pouvoirs publics en matière de salaires, de retraites, etc., préceptes que nous avons toujours défendus. Mais il est évident que l'assainissement des C. F. F., qui coûtera cher au pays, suppose que chacun fasse preuve de bonne volonté, les fonctionnaires comme les autres.
