TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS IN SWITZERLAND.

We regret that due to the "Defence Regulations" the delivery of the Swiss Observer abroad has been delayed or omitted. We have now been granted a special licence from the Postal Censorship department and this should facilitate the regular receipt of our publication. We shall be pleased to forward any back copies which may have gone astray during the last few weeks.

We also wish to point out to our readers in this country that no copies of the Swiss Observer can be sent abroad unless this is done from our office under the special licence.

NEWS AT RANDOM

The Army Command is exercising a rigid control on all activities in public and private life. An Order just issued emphasises that any opinions on foreign statesmen and countries publicly expressed may complicate the task of the authorities responsible for foreign relations. The attention of all officers and men is drawn to the absolute necessity of maintaining the greatest prudence and restraint in their utterances.

The political parties of most of the cantons have agreed to observe an election truce for the pending renewal of the Swiss Parliament. The former councillors in the absence of new nominations will therefore be declared elected. — Notable exceptions are Berne, Zurich, Aargau and Grisons.

One of the first casualties in our army is a Swiss from abroad: Hans Tinner, who returned from the north of Germany to join his regiment. He was knocked down by a motor-car in Niederwil and succumbed to his injuries the same night.

The new short-wave broadcasting station at Schwarzenburg which was destroyed by fire last July has now been rebuilt and is expected to operate early next year.

Sentences of from nine months to five years hard labour have been imposed by the St. Gall cantonal court on a number of shady financiers who were responsable for the collapse of the "Sparkasse Gams." Some of the seven accused have been in custody for over a year. Their own standing — one of them was the Austrian Consul — and the credit enjoyed by this small savings bank, enabled them to negotiate fraudulent transactions of considerable magnitude. The leader of this gang abstracted no less than Frs. 200,000 from the bank's funds.

The secretary of the Italian Fascio in Bellinzona, Enrico Mariani, has been arrested by the Federal police and is charged with military espionage.

The cost of living index figure to the end of September is stated to be 138.2 (June 1914=100) as compared with 137.2 for August and 137.3 for September 1938.

Minister Joseph Choffat died in Porrentruy at the age of 73; he was our representative in Vienna until 1914. Since his retirement he took a keen interest in institutions taking care of old people and poor children.

The frontier districts round Basle have been declared out of bounds by the military authorities as the regular strolls of sightseers are to be discouraged.

In order to further the construction of air-raid shelters in business and private houses a contribution of 15% of the cost is offered by the Zurich municipality and it is hoped that the canton and the Confederation will make a similar grant. The expense so incurred by the Zurich exchequer will be about Frs.900,000.

One of the three canal bridges between Widnau and Heerbrugg in the St. Gall Rheintal has been blown up; three soldiers were badly injured. So far the official inquiry has thrown no light on this mysterious affair.

A partial moratorium has been enacted by the Federal Council; it only takes effect in cases where hardship has been caused through the mobilisation.

As was to be expected, the import duties for the month of September show a considerable decline, viz. about  $7\frac{1}{2}$  million francs compared with the same month last year. For the whole of the nine months there is, however, still an improvement amounting to over 19 million over the previous period.

The "Railway Gazette" (13.10.39) singles out as a feat of engineering the 34 year-old motor coach which still runs on the light railway of the Birsigtalbahn (Basle). It is a double-bogie coach equipped with four Brown-Boveri 750 volt Motors and has so far covered well over a million miles.

The death has taken place at Zurich of Dr. Robert Haab. He was born in 1865 in Wädenswil, studied and practised law; early in life he interested himself in cantonal politics and was elected member of several administrative councils both in the town and canton of Zurich. From 1911 to 1917 he held a seat on the board of the Swiss Federal Railways; during the last war he was for a short time Swiss Minister in Berlin and on his return in 1918 he was elected Federal Councillor, taking charge of the post and railway Dr. Haab was twice president of the department. Swiss Confederation. He retired in 1930 owing to bad health.

Life in St. Gingolph as seen by a reporter of the "Daily Express", (17.10.39): I went to-day to the town hall at the village of St. Gingolph. The town hall is in Switzerland. The mayor is French.

When he talks to councillors who are Swiss he does so over a barbed wire fence. Because part of this odd spot is in France, part in Switzerland. Some of the St. Gingolph boys are fighting for France; some sit drinking to Swiss neutrality.

And they have black-outs in the French part of St. Gingolph — which must make it difficult for the mayor to hold a council at night.

In consequence of petrol rationing cycling has gained an unheard-of popularity. In Geneva, it is estimated, there is at present one cycle to every three inhabitants.

Snow has made its appearance in many districts: this is exceptionally early and under ordinary conditions it would have been welcomed. There are not likely to be winter sports to any extent as the wouldbe visitors are otherwise employed.

GROUP PARTIES TO SWITZERLAND.

In view of the numerous difficulties arising out of the present emergency the Swiss Legation has come to the rescue of all those wishing to return home. Particulars and detailed instructions have been posted to all compatriots who have registered for this purpose at the Legation since the outbreak of war. These organised groups are leaving this country between October 23rd and 28th, and all formalities, such as visé, through ticket, reservation, etc., are attended to by our Legation as long as the holder is in possession of a valid Swiss passport.

This, of course, should not be interpreted as meaning that it will be impossible to return indiwhenever this recommends itself. arrangements will have to be made and the granting of the English and French visés may be delayed for a few weeks.

A MEMORABLE SCAMPER ABROAD.

In these tragic days when we know not what the morrow will bring our thoughts often turn back to the past.

We pick out memorable days albeit some of these were equally sad and disturbing as the present time.

After the war we Swiss were all anxious to know how our relations in Switzerland had fared, we wished to see them and exchange views and experiences.

Thus on the 9th July, 1920, my wife and I travelled via Ostend to Swizterland.

In Ostend we chartered a motor-car to go to Ypres and to Vlamertinge, the British War Cemetery, where one of our sons was buried.

Our journey through Flanders was eventful because the roads were still bad and the countryside desolated and the car was old and giving trouble: three times we had to cool our heels while a burst tyre had to be mended. We lunched at Ypres, and we found the grave of our son; the cemetery was beautifully kept and our hearts were as glad as they could be under the circumstances of this sad pilgrimage.

Later we travelled from Brussels to Basel where we were met by my sister. We put up at the 3 Koenig Hotel and among the high lights of Basel for us were the evenings on the balcony of the hotel overlooking the Rhine in all its majesty.

From Basel we travelled to Brigue and thence by an Einspänner to Simplon Kulm where my brother and his wife were awaiting us.

Thereafter we had a glorious time, enjoying ourselves like children, playing pranks and allotria and forgetting for a while the past, as we thought, horrors of war.

We made several small climbing expeditions, called upon the Prior of the Simplon Hospiz and and motored down to the interesting gorge of Gendo.

July 29th we left Simplon, my brother and his wife accompanying us as far as the well-known Galleries (now mined) and this is the last glimpse I had of my brother. A few days later he ascended a small peak and never came back.

Diligent search was made by the natives and friends of his from the Alpine Club, but in vain.

We visited relations and friends at Zürich and on the 31st July left via Basel, Rheims, Laon and Calais. We had perforce to pass through the devastated areas and these are a few of the thumbnail sketches that my wife left on record:

"Coray Les Bains détruit." "Frenoncourt damaged." "Ferguier crowds of new huts. Worst trees cut down." "Cambrai church new roof." "Luguy bridge gone." "Armentières or Bailleul nought." "Hazebroeck bad. "Armentières only ruins." Wrecked forest." "St. Omer. Poilus on guard."

Nothing could have exemplified to us more the horrors of war than these sights along the railway and the acres of grim gravestones.

At 10.45 p.m. on the Sunday following we reached home and recommenced our daily round on the 3rd August, the day after Bank Holiday.
