TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Once again after a prolonged interval we make our bow to our indulgent subscribers. The interruption was due — as most of our friends are aware — to aerial visitations, no less than on four separate occasions, which played havoc with the printing plant of the publisher. The damage has now been temporarily repaired which will make it possible to carry on the printing works in a modest way, D.V. The heavy loss incurred added to the deficiency in vital advertising revenue would have meant the death blow to the S.O. were it not for the patriotic spirited action of a member of the Colony who shoulders the cost of this and the next issue which latter we hope to issue some time next month. We trust by that time to succeed in making such financial arrangements as will insure a regular publication.

We wish to offer humble apologies to the many subscribers who have written to us wondering at the sudden stoppage. It was impossible to answer all the letters — some of them were only disentangled weeks afterwards in the floating debris.

NEWS AT RANDOM

At the beginning of September the Federal Council authorised the Federal corn administration to deliver two hundred waggons of corn from reserves to Millers, against the undertaking that they should not raise the price of bread and flour by more than two francs per one hundred kilos. The measure was intended to help small millers who have been unable to constitute reserves. As from September 15th the price of bread was raised by two centimes per kilo loaf.

On the 30th August the Bund stated that no corn had been imported into Switzerland since the 10th June and that, owing to increased transport charges, the price of the latest imported corn had risen by fifteen francs to forty francs. Till then, thanks to reserves, it had been possible to avoid an increase in corn prices and the release of further reserves will ease the rise which inevitably must come. The price of bread is still lower in Switzerland than in other countries and below the 1914/18 price level.

The decree forbidding the sale of new bread has not lowered consumption to the extent anticipated.

On the 3rd September the Bund announced that the Canton of Berne has approved a labour creation programme totalling seventy-five million francs. The report of the cantonal council states that the commission proceeded on the principle that it is undesirable to create emergency work and that it is preferable to create opportunities for employment in existing or projected industrial, agricultural, transport and touristic undertakings where possible, and it is only in the absence of these that unessential public works are being considered. The projects include arterial and alpine roads and bridges, regulating of rivers, rebuilding of public buildings and public utility undertakings, reclamation and drainage of agricultural land and forests.

Further news is now available about the proposals made by the Union of Swiss Peasants at the beginning of September in a memorandum addressed to the Federal Department for Public Economy. The memorandum urges further rationalising of agriculture which would lead to increased production and wider employment. It points to labour shortage on the land and to the urgent need for reforming living conditions of the Swiss farm worker, notably continuity of employment throughout the year, cheaper dwellings, allotments and better social legislation. It is emphasised that there is need for creating further small holdings, but that an essential condition for this is that production be made worth while. Memorandum stresses discrepancy between costs and prices and that while a self-supporting policy is impossible, Switzerland might produce much that is now imported. It is estimated that the agricultural area might be increased by 250,000 acres and the 404,000 persons at present employed on agricultural work would be increased by another 50,000. The memorandum adds that Swiss agriculture spends 480,000,000 francs yearly on buildings, repairs and machinery and that an increase in agricultural workers would create industrial opportunities.

There is much talk in Central Switzerland of the construction of a roadway on the left side of the Vierwaldstättersee being counted amongst labour creation projects. It is estimated that it would cost Frs. 15,000,000. The proposition is favoured by the cantons of Lucerne, Nidwald and Uri, whereas Obwald would prefer the route to pass through the Titlis massif. Canton Schwytz fears the competition of such a route. It is said in Federal Palace circles that Federal Councillor Etter has little sympathy for such a proposition, so at least writes a correspondent from Uri to the Bund. However, it is judged that the creation of an artery Lucerne-Hergiswil-Stans-Beckenried-Seelisberg-Bauen joined to the Gothard route would be of great touristic and economic interest.

The "Statistical News" published by the Authorities of the town of Zürich contain quite a number of interesting details about the movements of the population, immigration, births, deaths and so on.

One learns from the latest issue that between 1934 and 1938 Zürich increased its population by 16,486 inhabitants, Lausanne by 7463, Winterthur by 4615, Berne by 2973 and Lucerne by 2951. Lausanne therefore appears to be the town with the biggest proportional increase.

On the other hand, Geneva, La Chaux-de-Fonds and St. Gall have lost, during the same period, 3,214, 1,456 and 571 inhabitants respectively. During the year 1939 the population of Zürich increased by 7384, i.e. 22.1 per thousand, and Lausanne 23 per thousand. In Zürich the number of deaths exceeds the number of births by 443. Lausanne is in about the same position. Zürich represents an interesting case with regard to the distribution of the sexes. Of its 337,164 inhabitants, at the end of 1939, 182,234 were women and 154,930 men. That is to say there were 1,176 women per 1,000 men. The number of weddings is, however, comparatively high, but in 707 cases the brides came from other localities and in 563 instances (one in every six) from abroad. The last figure is considered somewhat alarming in view of the efforts in progress to maintain the integrity of our national character. The "Journal de Genève" ads that the inclination of the German Swiss to marry women of other countries has nevertheless often produced very happy results.

Another figure of some interest is revealed, namely that the city of Zwingli contains more than 200,000 Catholics and has therefore become the biggest Catholic town in Switzerland.

Friday, November 8th, brought news of the resignation of Federal Councillor Minger, Head of the Military Department, and of Federal Councillor Baumann, Head of the Justice Department. Both Federal Councillors handed in their resignation as from the end of the current year.

Federal Councillor Minger, speaking on the subject of his resignation at the traditional Soirée for Members of the Federal Council, declared that it had been his intention to resign last year, hence the purchase of the estate in Schuepfen. The outbreak of the war and illness of his representative in the Council, M. Oprecht, forced him to delay his decision and to continue at his post for another year. Now, however, he was going back to his farming. Federal Councillor Minger reiterated that neither internal nor external politics had had any bearing on his resignation. He finished by stressing the firm determination of Switzerland to defend her neutrality.

During the night of the 6th November Swiss territory was again violated by 'planes which flew in over the Jura and continued on their course in a southeasterly direction. Anti-aircraft guns came into action and the 'planes turned back before crossing the Alps. The Swiss Legation in London have been instructed to protest against the violation of Swiss territory which has occurred despite assurances that Switzerland's neutrality would be respected.

The Army Command made the following announcements on November 6th:

- 1) It has been decided to institute a general "black-out" throughout Switzerland. This order is to come into force on November 7th.
- 2) As from the 7th November and until further notice "Black-out" will begin at 10 p.m. and will last until dawn.
- 3) It is to be left to the discretion of the borough officials to decide whether "Black-out" is to be made before 10 p.m.
- 4) In the case of a warning, public services will be allowed only sufficient light to ensure safety.
- 5) The above steps are being taken in accordance with the defence measures of the Army. Military penalties are applicable to these measures.

The Army Command added that normal lighting regulations had remained in force in Switzerland on the assumption that her neutrality would be respected and safeguarded. However, as it had been found that the lights had served as a guide to foreign 'planes, "Black-out" measures were now being taken with a full understanding of the dangers which they involve for Switzerland.

The Management of the Railways and Transport Communications states that in the interest of the public, trains and road vehicles will have to be blacked-out. In many places the "blacking-out" of railway stations will have to begin before 10 p.m. as it cannot be done everywhere simultaneously. The Management emphasised that the public could do much to prevent delays by adopting a disciplined attitude towards this new measure.

Swiss territory was again violated during the night of the 8th November. English 'planes flew in Federal Councillor Minger, Colonel-Divisionnaire Tissot and the President of the Swiss Shooting Association were present. On November 15th, commemorating the 625th anniversary of the Battle at Morgarten on November 15th, 1315, General Guisan, Commander in Chief of the Swiss Army, stressed in his speech that on this occasion several hundred confederates had routed cavalymen who outnumbered them both in equipment and strength. This victory had been due, not only to the personal bravery of each individual, but also to the nature of the Swiss country. The Central range of the Alps offered the best protection. "Now as then," he continued, "we were watching from our eyrie." In 1915 all Switzerland — civil population and army — had commemorated this memorable battle, to-day too it should be paid due tribute.

In a report made on the 21st November, the Swiss Committee of Economic Research stressed that Switzerland in common with the rest of the world was experiencing the penury of war. Naturally this would necessitate the fostering of agriculture and the forcing of imports of raw material and foodstuffs. The situation demanded sacrifices by way of taxes — the only means of covering the huge military expenses. Due note was also taken of the Federal Law regarding the protection of home workers.

On December 10th, 1940 the Federal Council assembled to vote for the successors of Federal Councillors Minger and Baumann respectively. The Council opened at 8.30 and long before this crowds had gathered outside the House. The Hall was packed at the beginning of the Session. He was a member of the Conservative Party which later amalgamated with the Bourgeois Party. He also belonged to the Bernese Bürgerrat body and the Cantonal Council. Searches were also carried out by the Authorities at the offices and amongst members of the pro-Nazi movement in Zürich, Geneva and Berne. In the same way the offices of the "Jeunesse Suisse" were searched. From material seized, it was established that this movement had about 2,000 members in the German-speaking part of Switzerland. The houses of all such persons are being watched by the Police.

GLEANINGS FROM THE ENGLISH PAPERS.

Very little reliable news from Switzerland finds its way into the English press. Aircraft flying over our country is a regular item; both belligerents seem to share in the trespass and our A.A. batteries spend plenty of ammunition in futile firing. Basle has suffered some damage from a stray bomb.

Though what is called the "National" movement has been liquidated in Switzerland the sponsors continue to propagate their views from abroad. The "Daily Herald," January 13th, reproduces the following Reuter message:

A storm of indignation has blown up in Switzerland, following publication of an article by the Swiss author, Jakob Schaffner, in the German weekly "Das Reich."

In it the author recommends the abandonment by Switzerland of her neutrality and her attachment to the German Reich.

Schaffner lives in Germany, while retaining his Swiss nationality.

M. Feldmann, a member of the National Council, writing in the "Neue Berner Zeitung," condemns Schaffner's "arrogance" in openly discussing in a foreign publication questions of Swiss policy.

The Swiss "National Zeitung" says it has never known so incomprehensible an interpretation of Swiss neutrality as that Schaffner outlines.

Another Swiss resident in Germany who is in the limelight is the subject of a narrative in "Cavalcade," January 11th; it makes good reading if taken with a grain of salt. Here it is:

Spunky little Switzerland is sparring up to the Nazi bully in defence of one of its native-born sons.
