The National Council approved Switzerland's adherence to the Marshall Plan by 136 votes to seven (all Communists). The States Council accepted it by 32 votes to 1 vote.

Before the vote was taken in the National Council there were noisy scenes during which Communist and non-Communist M.P.s stood up booing and shouting "Liar" at one another. A Communist proposal to put the Marshall Plan to a referendum was rejected by 109 votes to eight.

The Foreign Minister, M. Petitpierre, said: "There is absolutely no possibility of Switzerland's being drawn into a sort of military alliance. The Marshall Plan in no way conflicts with our national sovereignty or neutrality. But the Swiss people cannot allow neutrality to condemn them to a policy of indifference and to a timorous attitude." The bilateral treaty to be signed with the United States would be quite different from those concluded with other States. (Switzerland is receiving no direct aid.) "No American control of our economy would be justified."

The uproar began when M. Nicole, leader of the Workers' Party (Communists), rose to oppose the Marshall Plan. He said the Swiss Government had dissolved the Communist party in Switzerland in 1939 at the request of the German Legation. The uproar which followed lasted ten minutes before order could be restored.

During recent military exercises by Alpine troops successful experiments were made in supplying by air an infantry battalion which occupied positions on either side of the Sanetsch Pass (7,330ft.), in the Bernese Alps. Aircraft dropped containers from a height of 300ft. It was the first time that aircraft had been used for supplying troops in the Swiss Alps. The authorities now state that military aircraft will be used in the same way for dropping supplies to marooned climbers.

Economics

The Swiss wholesale price index was 1.1 points down at 214.1 at end-September, compared with the figure a month previously (August, 1939, equals 100).

All three main groups (foodstuffs, raw and auxiliary materials, fodder and fertilisers) participated in this decline.

Britain's exports to Switzerland during September were valued at Frs.21.8 millions (£1.25 millions), the same as in August, a figure low as compared with Frs. 38.5 millions (£2.22 millions) in May, the following three months having been characterised by a marked decline in the U.K. export volume. Swiss exports to Britain in September, Frs.12.9 millions (£.7 millions), compared with Frs.9.1 millions in August.

Total Swiss exports in September amounted to Frs.289.5 millions (£16.8 millions), against imports Frs.323.7 millions (£18.7 millions), yielding the lowest monthly adverse balance for two years.

For the first time in two months gold stocks and the foreign exchange holdings of the Swiss National Bank show a decline. For the week to October 7th there was a fall of Frs.25.3 millions in these two items.

The drop in the gold stocks, by Frs.20.8 millions to Frs.5,753 millions, is ascribed to the conversion by a foreign central bank of franc assets into gold.

Foreign exchange holdings were reduced by Frs.4.5 millions to Frs.170 millions, which may be explained by momentary requirements for somewhat substantial payments in connection with imports.

During the period under review notes in circulation were Frs.65.9 millions lower at Frs.4,256 millions.

The Belgian Government approved the terms of a commercial exchange agreement between the Belgo-Luxemburg economic union and Switzerland. The agreement, which is operative for one year from October 1st this year, provides for trade to the total value of £45,600,000. Exports from Switzerland to the other partners of the agreement will amount to £17,670,000, while trade in the opposite direction is to total £27,930,000.

For repaying the City of Zurich 1943 Four per Cent. Loan of Frs.30 millions a conversion issue of the same amount is being made at par, including Federal tax, bearing interest at 3½ per cent. and running for 15 years.

At end-September, the Swiss cost-of-living index, compared with a month earlier, was 0.3 points higher at 162.6. (August, 1939, equals 100.) The increase was mainly due to rising meat prices.

As a result of a recent meeting of an Italo-Swiss mixed commission in Berne, the commercial agreement between the two nations which expires on October 31st has been extended for another year.

It has been agreed that the balance in favour of Italy which is expected to result from the trading will be used to liquidate arrears owed by the Italian State to Switzerland and by private traders to Swiss firms.

Part of the arrears may also be liquidated by the undertaking in Italy of enterprises of common interest to both nations, financed partly by Italy and partly by new Swiss capital.

One thousand million dollars of de-blocked Swiss assets in the United States has so far been certified, it was officially announced. Since the term for certification has, with the consent of the U.S. authorities, been extended by a further three months till end-December, 1938, the actual amount is expected to be much higher, representing a considerable hard-currency reserve.

The transfer of these dollar assets to Switzerland will proceed step by step only, to avoid inflationary tendencies in this country.

Figures published recently by the Statistical Office of the town of Zurich, have shown that the number of divorces in Switzerland are on the increase. Switzerland is amongst the countries which register a high number of divorces.

Amongst the towns in Switzerland, Geneva is leading with 219 divorces per 100,000 inhabitants, followed by Zurich with 188, whilst Berne and Basle register 111 each. [A.T.S.]

National Councillor G. Duttweiler of "Migros" fame, threw two bricks through a window at the Federal Palais because, he says, his motion, that Switzerland should buy raw materials and foodstuffs to last two years, in case she is cut off by war, was scotched by closing the session an hour earlier. The great St. Bernard pass was the scene of a highway robbery. A blacksmith of Martigny, in Canton Valais, was driving to the hospice when, above Cantina de Proz, at an altitude of 6,100ft., three armed men wearing green uniforms stopped the car. They made the seven occupants hand over all their money, watches, and other valuables and ordered them to drive back. It is supposed that the highwaymen were Italian smugglers.

At the annual meeting of the International Union of Alpine Associations held in Geneva under the chairmanship of M. C. Egmond d'Arcis, of the Swiss Alpine Club, the question of the recovery of the cost of search parties was discussed. It is found every year that rescued alpinists or the families of climbers who have been killed are often not in a position to pay for the cost of the search for them, which has to be borne by the alpine club of the country concerned.

The union, which has been occupied with the question for some years, has not been able to suggest an effective and practical solution, but an experiment made by the Club Alpin Français seems to open the way towards solving the difficulty. This club has decided to levy a special tax on all visitors to its alpine huts and the yield from this tax is to be used for improving the rescue equipment and for paying the costs of search parties when those rescued or the relatives of those killed are unable to do so.

The World Health Organization has convened a conference of Government representatives from all war-devastated countries in Europe to meet in Geneva on November 15th and 16th.

by individual countries, and will decide on the size and location of the administrative office required for the work in question.
