Field-Marshal, Lord Montgomery, was the guest of the Swiss-British Society at a Banquet which took place at the "Congresshaus" in Zurich, on February 21st.

The President of the Society, Professor, Dr. H. Straumann, welcomed the distinguished guest, amongst those who attended the function were: Dr. A. Lüchinger, Mayor of Zurich, Miss Mary L. Kingsmill-Jones, Lord Mayor of Manchester, T. M. Snow, British Minister in Berne, A. N. W. Napier, British General-Consul, and representatives of the town of Zurich and the two Universities. Addressing the distinguished gathering Lord Montgomery said, amongst other things: "To-day, unpreparedness and unreadiness for war is merely to place a high trump card, possibly the highest, in the hands of a potential enemy. The two essential cards to hold are: National Security and Economic Stability. These are interdependent. Without them, a nation is certain, sooner or later, to have to sacrifice its principles, independence, freedom and traditional way of life — or else face defeat in war and be overrun by the enemy. We are supposed to be at peace, but it is a very uneasy peace which broods over the world."

Lord Montgomery said that the vital attributes of a military leader, without which he would fail were decision in action and calmness in crisis. "Some people are inclined to summon the psychiatrist to their aid when selecting leaders," he said. "I consider this practice to be wrong; you cannot select leaders in that way."

Other comments by the Field-Marshal were: "A soft army is useless. The soldier must be hard and tough and be trained to fight and to kill."

The human factor: "A man must dominate the events that surround him. Once a man lets events get the better of him, he is useless as a leader. Character is a spiritual quality."

Previous to the dinner, Lord Montgomery drove through the principal streets of the town, followed by a visit to the "Stadthaus" where he was received by the Mayor of the town of Zurich, Dr. A. Lüchinger, who presented him with a memento of the town.

The distinguished guest also paid a visit to the University of Zurich where he addressed the students.

On the following day, Lord Montgomery travelled to Berne, where he was received by the President of the government of the canton Berne, at the "Rathaus", where several speeches were made. In the afternoon he drove through the town of Berne and visited a Chocolate Factory.

On Wednesday, February 23rd, Lord Montgomery was the guest of the Swiss Government at a Luncheon, and in the afternoon he made a trip to Bienne where he visited various factories. On Thursday he left our country to return home. Everywhere the distinguished guest went, he received a hearty ovation by the population.

port by the Mayor of Zurich, Dr. A. Lühinger, who was accompanied by the British Consul, Mr. Napier.

A banquet was held for the civic party at the Muraltengut, during which Dr. Lühinger toasted the Lord Mayor and the prosperity of Manchester and the future of the airline (Swissair) which linked it with Zurich. He presented to the Lord Mayor and illustrated book of the history of the town of Zurich.

The Lord Mayor in return presented to the Mayor of Zurich a tray made from wood taken from Manchester's bombed Free Trade Hall. She spoke touchingly of the debts Britain owes to the Swiss, for their work for British prisoners of war and the International Red Cross.

Other speakers were, Mr. W. Caller, President of the Zurich Chamber of Commerce and Mr. E. A. Carpenter, President of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the latter brought the greetings of his organisation to "the cleanest town in the world."

On the following day the Lord Mayor spent a 12 hour day of official visits and sightseeing in the town.

The tour began at 9 a.m. with a visit to the "Rathaus" where she watched a session of the Cantonal Parliament. Afterwards she visited two public libraries and the historic old town. The greater part of the day was devoted to visits to the city's housing estates, schools, Universities and the municipal children's home at Höngg.

The Lord Mayor also attended the luncheon given by the British-Swiss Society in honour of Field-Marshal Lord Montgomery.

Only once, during the winter of 1857-58, was the level of the Rhine lower than now. That, and the heavy drain on the artificial lakes — some of which are half empty — justifies new restrictions on electricity consumption which will be enforced in Switzerland. Space and water heating, shop window lighting, and flood-lighting are almost completely banned. Street lighting and lighting in homes are to be reduced by one-third, and industry is to halve last year's already curtailed consumption.

The situation will be reviewed before March 15th, when further drastic curtailments may be enforced — for example, a substantial reduction in the train services — if rain does not fall in abundance before that date.
