Negotiations are reported to begin soon between Italy and Switzerland to settle overdue interest on Italian bonds held by Swiss citizens. Italian loans have been concluded in Switzerland under conditions that would permit the Swiss to ask for a more advantageous settlement than with the United States.

Nevertheless, since the latter enjoys a most-favoured-nation clause, and is a creditor for much bigger sums, Swiss negotiators are not likely to press the point too hard even if the commercial balance remains favourable to Italy.

Interest arrears are estimated at 40 per cent. If the so-called American solution is applied — which seems very probable — they will be converted into capital.

Courtesy, given by a waiter to an hotel guest in Berne, has made the waiter a millionaire.

Henri Winzenried, for many years head waiter in the most fashionable hotel in the Swiss capital, has just been left two million Swiss francs (approximately £200,000) by a guest he used to serve, "in gratitude for the kindness he showed to a poor old woman."

The woman, a regular client, always took one of the cheapest rooms and rewarded the staff's efforts with nothing more than a curt "Thank you."

Some time ago the visits ceased, and nothing was heard of the woman until Winzenried received official notification of her death — and her will.
