Three Swiss youths on a motoring holiday in this country were in a German "Volkswagen" which ran off the road and overturned at Carfraemi, Berwickshire, on the 25th of July. They were taken by ambulance to Edinburgh Infirmary. The driver was Christoph Marx (19), of Zurich, and his passengers were his 16 year old brother, Dietrich, of Basle, and Erich Weber (18), also of Zurich.

The undermentioned anniversaries are announced from Switzerland.

Rudolf Schlatter (90), author and journalist, of Lucerne. He writes under the nom de plume "R. E. Anders."

Roberts Marchand (75), Honorary President of the International "Automobil Salons", he was one of the pioneers of motoring in Switzerland; from 1923-1933 he was President of the Organisation Committee of the International "Automobil Salons". [A.T.S.]

The passenger traffic on the Rhaetian Railways in 1950 continued to be adversely affected by the increasing road competition; the number of passengers conveyed, 5,187,060, was only 0.2 per cent. lower than in 1949, but more serious was the decline in passenger-km., from 113,800,000 in 1949 to 104,440,000, or 8.2 per cent.

The road competition chiefly affected the first and second class traffic was down by 9 per cent. The only class of passenger traffic which increased was group and collective travel — 55,158 passengers, compared with 21,356 in 1949.

Goods traffic registered a decline of 3.2 per cent. only (compared with one in 1949 of 14.8 per cent.) to 336,400 tonnes; goods mileage increased by 5.8 per cent. to 13,530,000 tonne-km.

Because of the financial situation, the scheduled services had to be reduced beginning with the 1950-51 winter time-table, by 7 per cent. Offers to substitute road services for the discontinued train services, made by the Postal Administration and also private road hauliers, had to be declined because it was found that they would have cost the Rhaetian Railways more than the train services which they were intended to replace.

Music lovers from all over the world are journeying to Lucerne for the International Music Festival from August 11th to September 2nd. Five symphony concerts, scenes from "The Twilight of the Gods" by Richard Wagner, Bach's "Mass in B Minor", two serenades, three chamber music concerts, and a cathedral concert are in the programme.

The festival offers more than that, however. To the devotee of music among the most important items are the courses in pianoforte, violin, violoncello, and singing for all professionals and students who are sufficiently advanced.

These are held at the Himmelreich Conservatoire and are conducted by famous musicians — Professor Edwin Fischer (pianoforte), Wolfgang Schneiderhan (violin), Enrico Mainardi (violoncello), and Franziska Martienssen-Lohmann and Paul Lohmann (singing).

In its setting of quiet beauty at the foot of the Alps, the festival has grown steadily year by year since its inception in 1938. In 1939 the number of events was increased and the framework created for the following years. Even during the war the festival was kept alive.

It is the festival committee's ambition to present the best that music has to offer, and it spares no pains in gathering musicians of the highest calibre. This year Leopold Stokowski will be a visitor for the first time, conducting the opening concert.

There are also many sporting events for the entertainment of the visitors.
