The Swiss Federal Office of Electric Economy recently published interesting data dealing with the production and consumption of electrical energy in Switzerland. According to this report, the annual production during the period October, 1949 to September, 1950, amounted to 10,479 million kWh (including energy supplied by thermal power stations) as compared with 9,745 million kWh produced during the previous year. In 1949-50 electricity supply companies generated 79.2 per cent. of the total, the rest being produced by the railways and industrial companies. Swiss power stations exported some 140 million kWh but about 258 million kWh were imported from abroad. By October 1st, 1950, numerous power stations were either under construction or being enlarged. When the extensive constructional work now in progress is completed, which is expected to be by the winter of 1955-56, the country will be in a very satisfactory position, and even if weather conditions are extremely unfavourable it is expected that all demands for electricity will be met.
