The National Council, or second chamber, of the Swiss Parliament passed, by 72 votes against 71, a Bill providing for the reorganisation of Federal finances proposed by the Government. This is considered as a Government defeat, and it is expected that the Bill will be withdrawn as a one vote majority clearly indicates that it will be rejected by the electorate.

The reorganisation of the Federal finances, with the object of supplying Federal authorities with the necessary means to carry out their tasks, has been under discussion for nearly two years, and a first Bill was rejected last year by the electorate.

In August of last year, he broke out of the prison of Bellchasse, where he was serving a sentence, and went to his native village of Bionnens, in order to see the President of the commune, who he considered to be responsible for his prison sentence.

Under the impression that he was facing the man he was seeking he point blank fired a shot and killed, not the intended President, but the fiancé of the latter's daughter. Previous to the shooting he had set fire to the house of the President of the commune. Gavillet, then took refuge in the surrounding woods, where after a 10 days hunt by the police, he was arrested at Yverdon. [A.T.S.]

Switzerland's 10,000 postmen received an official bulletin on How to Make Friends with Dogs.

First rule: Never show fear or distrust — call a dog by its name and talk in a friendly way.

Where "difficulties are encountered" a bone or sausage ends will "work wonders."

But where kindness fails this is the way . . . "Stand with body slightly crouched forward, using the postbag as a shield and look straight at the dog. If it snarls or threatens to bite, a sharp exclamation of 'Scram!' is most likely to send the dog recoiling."

Hermann Geiger, Switzerland's "pilot of the glaciers", is rapidly making a name for himself as one of Europe's most intrepid aviators. This winter he has flown his little Piper aircraft, fitted with skis, to spots hitherto thought inaccessible.

Mr. Geiger, chief pilot at Switzerland's Sion airport, landed a passenger on the 11,480ft. high St. Théodule pass, at the foot of the Matterhorn. Next he touched down near the upper station of the Médran chairlift, which carries skiers from the Valais resort of Verbier to the Ruinettes ski-slopes. At the end of January he caused a sensation by skilfully guiding his plane down on to the topmost slope of the 6,700ft high Rochers de Naye, above Montreux. Last month, accompanied by a Radio Geneva commentator, he took off from Sion and ten minutes later landed near to the terminus station of the Bella-Lui aerial cable railway, to the cheers of more than a thousand spectators. The many landings he has made on glaciers and snow-slopes are considered by pilot Geiger as training exercises for possible rescue operations.

Next month Boris Kniassef, the world-famous dancer and teacher, is to open an international school of dancing in Lausanne. Kniassef, who is moving to Switzerland from Paris, has made international stars out of such dancers as Algaroff, Skoutaroff, Roland Petit, Yvette Chauviré, Solange Schwarz, Renée Jeanmaire and Jean Babilée.

Announcing his move, the man who has been called "the teacher of the stars" said he found the climate of Lausanne was "most favourable" for his project. One of the big attractions at the "Fêtes de Lausanne" in June will be the corps de ballet of the Marquis of Cuevas and the Paris Opéra companies.

The first of Switzerland's four national fairs — the Swiss Industries Fair — opens this month. It is being held in Basle from April 11th to 21st. The "Comptoir Suisse", which is western Switzerland's trade fair, will be in Lausanne from September 12th to 27th. From October 3rd to 18th, the Lugano Swiss Fair will be attracting visitors to southern Switzerland, and last of them all will be the ten-day Swiss Agricultural and Dairy Fair (OLMA) which opens in St. Gallen on October 8th.

Single tickets from the Swiss frontier (including airports) are valid for the return journey, if they are stamped at the fair.

Incidentally, the triangular-shaped sign which is placed on the summits of Swiss mountains for topographical purposes has been chosen as the new symbol for the Bâle Fair. This is the centre-piece of new posters designed by Donald Brun.

Meeting at Berne under the presidency of Professor Joseph Kaelin of Fribourg, the 45-strong committee of the Swiss National Foundation for Scientific Research heard that 600,000 Swiss francs (£49,000) had been spent in subsidies to private individuals, in addition to the 50,000 francs (£4,084) which have already been handed over to Switzerland's nine universities.

To celebrate the 150th anniversary of the entry of the Canton of Vaud into the Swiss Confederation, the Cantonal Fine Arts Museum in Lausanne has planned an exhibition of 250 works dating from the end of the 18th century onwards. An important place will be reserved for the works of the ever-popular Félix Vallotton. Among contemporary artists whose work will be displayed is René Auberjonois — soon to be the subject of a special exhibition at the Bâle Fine Arts Museum.

Well over a year before it is due to take place, preparations have been started for a giant tourism and catering exhibition which is to be held in Berne, the Swiss capital, from May 14th to June 21st, 1954. Organisations from other countries have already expressed their keen interest in this exhibition, which will cover an area of 148,000 cubic metres. Support is already being given by the Swiss Federal Railways, the Swiss Postal Administration, the private railway companies, the Swiss Hoteliers' Association, the Swiss Café and Restaurant Proprietors' Association, the Swiss Dining Car Company and the Station Buffets, the Swiss National Tourist Office and other organisations. The purpose of the exhibition is to show the ethical and economical importance of the tourist and hotel industry and in particular culinary art, and how this industry contributes to better international understanding. Apart from travel and the culinary arts, the exhibition will incorporate a show of kitchen, bakery and butchers' machinery, as well as table silver, porcelain, glassware and auxiliary equipment. Various section will deal with Inquiry Services, Travel Agents, Railways, Postal Coaches, Air Transport, Road Transport, etc., as well as hotels and inns.

The highlight of the exhibition should be the culinary section in which 7 to 8 countries are expected to participate. Planned are: 1. a giant model kitchen where a large number of cooks can be seen at work; 2. the prepared specialities will be served in a large international restaurant; 3. a dietary kitchen with restaurant attached; 4. a section devoted to the future of the culinary profession and trade schools; 5. a lecture hall and room for demonstrations; 6. a literary and historical section; 7. magnificently decorated display tables; 8. a great number of famous books, as well as rare menus and pictures of celebrated late chefs; 9. a model bar, in which international cocktail-making competitions will be held; 10. the wine section will be represented by some picturesque taverns. It is also hoped to show a quick-service restaurant equipped with the most up-to-date devices. One of the latest dining and saloon cars, now under construction, of the Swiss Federal Railways, should be a special attraction.

The war-time Soviet spying ace, Rudolf Roessler, alias Selzinger, who under the name of "Lucy" supplied the Soviet High Command, as well as the Swiss Director of Military Intelligence, with a fortnight's warning about the impending German attack on Russia, and later with an up-to-date daily order of battle of the German forces in the East, was arrested in Lucerne.

Also arrested with him after the Swiss security authorities had unearthed an entirely new Communist spy ring was a Swiss Left-Wing journalist, Dr. Xavier Schnieper.
