The Swiss Post Office demonstrated a completely automatic international telephone system linking six countries. Numbers in London, Paris, Milan, Stockholm, and anywhere in Belgium or Federal Germany can be dialled direct from Geneva. The equipment is installed in a building where a meeting of the International Telephone and Telegraph consultative committee is going on.

Under the system a caller dials a prefix for the country, then another for the exchange, and finally the individual number required. The telephones for London and Paris have letters as well as figures on the dial. A similar system already operates on a limited basis between Brussels and Paris.

A Well-Hidden Treasure.

Approximately 100 years ago, Moutier, in the Bernese Jura, which has just received the status of a town, was still in possession of one of the oldest and most remarkable Roman churches. It was replaced in 1858 by the Church of St. Germain, an architectural patchwork in bad taste and in keeping with the artistic fashion of the "turn of the century". It was decided some time ago to restore the Church of St. Germain and an architect was commissioned to undertake an examination to this effect. To his great surprise, he discovered that the old Roman church had not been destroyed as was generally believed and as the historians had affirmed, for underneath a thick layer of mortar some genuine Roman pillars and capitals were brought to light. After having been restored, the Church of St. Germain will be one of the oldest historical monuments of Roman art in Switzerland and, according to the statements of some experts, also one of the most beautiful.

THROW OUT BALLAST!

Do you know that you waste time, if you still post LEDGER CARD, STATEMENT and DAYBOOK in separate operations, since you can produce these three records at one entry and even without the use of carbon paper?

The HERMES INTROMAT Bookkeeping Typewriter offers you an efficient and always up-to-date system, typewritten figures and therefore, clean and legible copies.

Its low price of only £200 brings this machine within the reach of even smaller firms; enabling them to throw out ballast.
