VARIOUS.

Interlaken. It was news even to many an enthusiastic admirer of Switzerland's famous "Glacier Pilot", Hermann Geiger, to learn that 40 years ago, in July 1919, the first successful landing on a glacier near the glamorous vantage point of Jungfraujoch (11,333 ft.) had been effected by Swiss Air Force Pilot Robert Ackermann in a somewhat fragile Swiss-made "Haefeli DH-3". In commemoration of Robert Ackermann's pioneering flight, a memorial bronze plate was recently inaugurated at the Jungfraujoch. Glacier aviation, for several years a speciality of Swiss Pilots, is considered in this mountainous country as an outstanding, though daring, device for rescue purposes.

Berne. Every seventh Swiss was in possession of a motor vehicle by the end of 1958, the Swiss Federation for Road Traffic stated recently. With some 726,000 registered vehicles serving a population of 5,210,000, Switzerland is now one of the most heavily "motorized" countries in Europe. This figure does not include an additional 125,000 army cars, or tractors and other agricultural vehicles. Furthermore, an estimated thirteen to fourteen million foreign cars and motorcycles entered Switzerland temporarily last year.

Pontresina. Some 20,000 pieces of trout fry have recently been dumped in the lovely mountain lakes, Lej Nair and Lej Pitschen, on the Bernina pass near Pontresina. As trout fishing at an altitude of 6,500 feet above sea level is considered one of the "free-of-charge" tourist facilities of the glamorous resort in the Engadine valley, the Pontresina Tourist Association is anxious to maintain a permanent live stock of fish in order to safeguard the area's reputation as an "anglers' paradise".

Gstaad. Britain's Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein will be opening the 15th International Ski Jumping Competition, named after and patronized by him, on a new ski jump on 7th February 1960. The new installation will allow competitors to perform jumps of 250 feet and more. The whole construction — the costs of which are estimated at 40,000 Swiss francs — also includes a new platform for the jury and the press. It is expected that Gstaad's 15th Montgomery Cup will attract even more jumping fans than the years before as one of the outstanding events in its field.

Lausanne. Alberto Camenzind, Chairman of the Swiss Federation of Architects, was recently elected Chief Architect of the Swiss National Exhibition fixed for 1964 in Lausanne. Swiss National Exhibitions are held every 25 years in one of Switzerland's major cities; the last one was in Zurich in 1939. The purpose of these large-scale shows is to remind the Swiss people of their own "national line", and at the same time to give foreign visitors a complete picture of what Switzerland has achieved in the past and what it is going to undertake in the future. Several preparatory activities in view of the exhibition, including the construction of an "autobahn" highway leading from Geneva to Lausanne, have already been started.

Sion, the capital of the Swiss Canton Valais, is staging its new "sound-and-light" performances which are considered as one of the most spectacular open-air festivals in the world. The setting consists of the town's two romantic hills, which are crowned by one of the oldest churches of Europe and the remains of the medieval episcopal palace, the "Valeria", and the "Tourbillon". The thoroughly modern conception suggests that these two hills "narrate" the extremely rich and colourful history of Sion; for this purpose, Maurice Zermatten, a local poet, has written a series of texts which have been recorded and will be transmitted, together with the musical sequences composed by Georges Hänni, through seven loudspeakers, while the scenery will be floodlit by some 150 projectors. The cost of installations for these performances amounted to a total of 750,000 Swiss francs. A thousand visitors per night are expected during the summer seasons.

The majestic Alpine scenery never fails to attract large numbers of visitors to Switzerland each year. Once upon a time only the mountaineers were privileged to experience a close-up view of the magnificent scenic beauty of the Alpine peaks. To-day these pleasures and delights are available to all, thanks to boldly constructed mountain railways and alpine roads. The popular Swiss Alpine Postal Coaches, in their bright yellow attire, maintain regular services on the famous passes throughout the Summer. Holders of the Swiss Holiday Ticket pay only half-fare.

A new "Mot-Hotel" has been opened recently by the Touring Club of Switzerland at Ragaz Spa. The so-called "castle" of Ragaz has been transformed into an hotel and sixteen motel bungalows situated in a wonderful park have been added. The "mot-hotel" also boasts a comfortable camping site.

The Lucerne Courses on Tourism, which will be organized, for the tenth time, from October 26th to 29th 1959, will live up to their international reputation as a "high academy of tourist experts". Lectures will be given by Swiss, German and Italian experts, and other features include practical exercises, discussions, and excursions in to the lovely surroundings of Lucerne. The courses are open to managers and qualified executives of tourist and travel offices, railway companies, airlines and hotels, and to travel writers and other persons interested in or connected with tourism.

The loftiest Alpine Gardens in Europe are situated on top of the Rochers-de-Naye above the glamorous Swiss lakeside resort of Montreux (Lake Geneva), at an altitude of more than 6,500 feet above sea level. Among the most interesting flowers to be seen are those brought back by the Swiss expedition to Mount Everest. The Alpine Gardens are easily accessible within five minutes from the Rochers-de-Naye Hotel.

SWISSAIR'S OPERATION IN FIRST HALF OF 1959

Swissair's traffic results for the first half of 1959 show an increase of eight per cent in both capacity offered and utilised, compared with the same period a year ago. Ton-kilometres produced totalled nearly 95 million and revenue ton-kilometres performed 54.5 million.

Passenger and mail traffic each increased by three per cent. Cargo traffic showed relatively the largest expansion, with an increase of 34 per cent to 11.2 million ton-kilometres. This was mainly due to the operation of the DC-6A Cargoliner, which also contributed to an increase of 64 per cent in Swissair's freight traffic on the North Atlantic. Another notable increase in freight carriage — by 39 per cent — was recorded on the Far East route. Overall, the share of freight in Swissair's traffic rose in the period under review from 17 to 21 per cent.

Average load factor on the schedule services remained unchanged at 57.6 per cent.

Despite jet competition Swissair carried 15.6 per cent more passengers across the North Atlantic than in the first half of 1958. Apart from the general expansion of travel between the United States and Europe, a popular innovation contributed to Swissair's success in this field: Passengers flying first-class by Swissair from New York to Europe can at time of booking choose their meals in advance from a menu card containing some 30 different dishes.

The company considers the above results satisfactory, as it is this year completing its preparations to put jets into service and in this transitional period faces competition from carriers already operating jet aircraft.

Three new destinations — Ankara, Kuwait and Teheran — were added to Swissair's network in the first half of this year. The present network has an unduplicated length of nearly 125,000 kilometres (77,400 miles) and covers 54 cities in North America, South America, Europe, Africa and Asia. In terms of the length of routes flown regularly, Swissair is now in sixth place among the 88 member companies of IATA.
