Distribution of the 196 seats in the National Council, the Lower House of the Swiss Parliament, altered little in the recently held general elections.

The Socialists, previously the largest party, lost two seats and now have 51, the same number as the Radicals. The Catholic-Conservative party, with two losses and two gains, maintained its position as the third largest party.

The Communists had a net loss of one seat, having made good one of their losses by topping the poll in Geneva, and will have three representatives in the new House.

Party strength after the elections, which were held on the basis of proportional representation, were:

Socialists	51	(2 losses)
Radicals	51	(1 gain)
Cath.-Cons.	47	(no change)
Peasant & Bourgeois	23	(1 gain)
Independents	10	(no change)
Liberals	5	(no change)
Democrats	4	(1 loss)
Evangelicals	2	(plus 2)
Communists	3	(1 loss)

About 65 per cent of the all-male electorate went to the poll.

Partial elections to the Council of States, the Upper House of Parliament, showed no notable changes and maintained its comfortable centre majority.

Customs receipts for the month of September 1959 totalled 92.4 million francs, of which amount the Confederation receives 60.9 million francs or 3.8 million francs more than in September 1958.

During the first nine months of the current year the receipts amounted to 529.3 million francs, which is 4.5 million francs more than during the same period in 1958.

The Swiss Federal Railways carried 20.1 million passengers in September 1959, or 800,000 fewer than in September 1958. Receipts: 34.4 million francs. (September 1958: 35.7 million francs.)

Goods traffic is returned as 2.35 million tons, or 180,000 tons more than in the same period in 1958. Receipts: 45.0 million francs (September 1958: 41.5 million francs)

According to the statistics of the French Customs Administration it would appear that the trade balance between France and Switzerland is more favourable to France than is her trade balance with any other country. France's balance sheet in regard to her trade balances with all countries, in 1958, shows a favourable balance of 33 thousand million francs in respect of Switzerland, of 20 thousand million francs in respect of Great Britain, and of 17 thousand million francs in that of Italy. France's most unfavourable balance is with the United States of America.

Some 22,000 drivers of heavy trucks recently decided to make a special contribution to the fight against the ever increasing rate of road accidents. These "knights of the highways" undertake to keep always to the extreme right, stop at a safe distance from closed railway barriers and to control exhaust gases. As a distinctive emblem, the truck drivers have chosen a white star which they attach to their vehicles. "White star", in fact, has already become a synonym for "highway courtesy" in Switzerland.

St Moritz, Winter sports fans will now be able to have a leisurely open-air swim watching the snowflakes whirling down. St. Moritz tourist officials announced here recently. One of the palatial hotels of this world-famed Swiss winter and summer resort has inaugurated a year-round open-air swimming pool, the water of which is being electrically heated during winter-time. The pool is designed after the most up-to-date American structures and named after Esther Williams, the famous American swimmer and movie star.

"It's a Raffael!" scenographer and restorer Adolf Engel recently affirmed to beaming town officials at Willisau, after visiting the ancient town hall when he thoroughly examined a badly neglected painting. He claimed that this must be an original sketch of the Italian renaissance artist's planned painting "The Battle of Constantin", which had been ordered by Pope Leo X but was actually painted by Raffael's pupil Giulio Romano. To prove his sensational theory Engel travelled to Rome to compare the Willisau sketch with Giulio Romano's picture in the Vatican's Constantin Hall. Although challenged by some other Swiss experts, Engel maintains that tiny Willisau (pop. 2,100) is harbouring a unique and priceless art treasure.

The Swiss Parliament has now ratified the proposal to modernise the Stansstad-Engelberg Railway and link it with the Bruenig Line at Hergiswil. The project includes a one-mile-long tunnel from Hergiswil to a point near the present road bridge across the narrow entrance to the Alpnachsee, a concrete viaduct, improvements to the permanent way, new electric power plant and six three-coach electric train sets, each with a capacity of approx. 200 passengers. Fast trains will complete the journey between Lucerne and Engelberg in 50 minutes as against 1½-2 hours it takes now. Three years will be needed for the work involved.

Geneva. A new apparatus which was invented by three Geneva technicians may well be destined to revolutionize to-day's system of parking in areas with limited space, Geneva's daily newspaper "Tribune de Genève" reported recently. The "mobile chronograph", as it has been named by its inventors, can be attached to any motor vehicle where it will start registering time as soon as the car stops moving. The checking of the "mobile chronograph" is as easy as the control of parking meters which nowadays "ornament" the pavements of Swiss cities, and "cheating" is practically impossible as a reverse movement of at least forty yards is required to bring the meter back to zero. The only problem is that every motorist would be compelled to buy his own "parking outfit" which would cost him an estimated S.fr. 20.—. However, "Tribune de Genève" points out that this amount would soon be amortized since the motorist would no longer have to drop coins into parking meters. Geneva city officials are said to be testing this new system before purchasing another 500 parking meters, and it is expected that the federal authorities will examine the possibility of introducing it on a nation-wide basis.

Basel. When a huge African Elephant of Basel's famous Zoological Gardens was pushed recently through the entrance of one of the city's hospitals it soon turned out that the pitiful passers-by who deplored the "poor sick animal" had jumped to foregone conclusions. "Omari", a tractable bull, in fact did not show the slightest sign of illness but was simply being used as a "guinea-pig" by a firm specializing in radiographs. A röntgenogram of "Omari's" majestic head would have been the main exhibit at a publicity show, but although the installations at this hospital are modern and otherwise very efficient, and a special "jumbo-size" film was being used for this occasion, the X-rays failed to pass through the elephant's bulky forehead. Other sections of "Omari's" body also proved impenetrable, and, in the end, the specialists had to content themselves with the röntgenogram of one of the animal's feet. It was now "Omari's" turn to shake his head pitifully while quietly returning to the homely zoo.

Mountaineering tours to several Alpine peaks towering 10,000 ft. above sea level are organised every week by the tourist office of Mürren, Bernese Oberland. The jaunts are led by expert Swiss mountain guides and offered as a free-of-charge facility to holiday-makers visiting this Alpine summer and winter resort.

Zurich — Heidi, the little Swiss girl made world-famous by Johanna Spyri, Switzerland's favourite writer for young people, and her playmate, Goat Peter, recently arrived here via Swissair directly from Tokyo. The tiny Japanese schoolgirl, Kazue Saito, 12, and her 12 year old companion, Ichizo Kato, as a matter of fact, came not out of Frau Spyri's book but merely posed as Heidi fans. When "Heidi and Peter", a production by the Swiss film company Praesens, made its appearance in Japan's cinemas they entered a nation-wide essay contest for school-children. Their nicely written pieces on Heidi and the Swiss Alps won them a Swissair flight to Zurich and a holiday trip through Heidi's own homeland. Accompanied by a Tokyo news reporter they visited the hamlet of Hirzel in the Canton of Zurich where Johanna Spyri spent most of her life, the picturesque winegrowers' town of Maienfeld near Ragaz Spa in the foothills of the Grisons mountains, where the author of "Heidi" is said to have modelled her heroine after a local peasant girl, and the Diavolezza above Pontresina which was one of the scenic locations of the Heidi film. Before returning to Tokyo by air the two Japanese children spent a day at the Pestalozzi Children's Village near Trogen where orphans from all over the world have been given a happy home and upbringing.

Pontresina — At the upper fringe of the Languard Forest, overlooking Pontresina from an altitude of over 6000 ft above sea-level, stands the quaint little mountain church of Santa Maria which in recent months has been carefully restored and equipped with special protective devices against frost, snow and humidity. It has been known for some time that this Marian chapel contained precious art works some of which were discovered only a few decades ago.

It has now been established that the murals which will henceforth be protected from weather-beatings, include priceless frescoes of the early 12th century and 19 paintings depicting the Mary Magdalene legend and dating back to the second half of the 15th century.

A new "Mot-Hotel" has been opened recently by the Touring Club of Switzerland at Ragaz Spa. The so-called "castle" of Ragaz has been transformed into a hotel and sixteen motel bungalows situated in a wonderful park have been added. The "mot-hotel" also boasts a comfortable camping site.

THE WEEK AT HOME.

By MAX NEF

The Autumn Session of the Federal Parliament came to an end, in October, and with it, also, the 35th present legislative period. On the first Monday, in December, the new Lower Chamber resulting from the October elections, will be sworn in, for a new period of office, extending over four years. This means a new period of office, also, for the Federal Government, which will have to be elected by the new Parliament. It is still too early to make any surmises regarding the possibilities of new replacements in the Cabinet. Although — when compared with similar conditions

Pictures like this that can't be posed—the living, breathing, moving happenings that make the best pictures of all can only be taken with a cine camera. And the beauty of it is that cine films are far from expensive. With this Bolex B8 you can take 24 or more good length action sequences for just over £1, including processing charge. At under 11d. a shot this compares very favourably with ordinary still photography. See the Bolex B8 at any good photo shop. Note its precision construction—so vital in a cine camera.
