SWITZERLAND AT SYDNEY'S FAIR

Switzerland will be represented at this year's Sydney International Trade Fair (1st to 12th August) both officially and through private industry, the Fair thus constituting the first big advertising campaign for Swiss industry in Australia. In accordance with the growing world-wide tendency to organise international trade fairs in distant markets, Swiss industrialists, too, are showing an increased interest in participating in such overseas displays of national achievements.

Pavilion 8 of the Sydney Fair, near the halls reserved for the official exhibitions of Italy, France, Germany and Japan, will provide a comprehensive view of Swiss industry. Already it is clear that this exhibition of Swiss achievements will be presented in a most elegant and richly varied form.

One of the main attractions in the Swiss pavilion will undoubtedly be the joint exhibition of the Swiss watch-makers; visitors will be able to see a great many watches of all shapes and sizes suitable for all occupations, requirements and occasions — in such variety as has probably never before been seen in Australia. Besides these miniature precision mechanisms and jewellery pieces, the embroidery and fine fabrics industries will be showing their latest creations, providing an enthralling experience for the ladies. Apart from the combined exhibits, the representatives of some of the most important St. Gall export firms will have their own stands for showing their highly fashionable materials, which are a hallmark of elegance throughout the world.

Chemical and pharmaceutical manufacturers are collaborating in an exhibition of their world-famous specialities, which emphasises the importance of these for Swiss foreign trade. A general review of Switzerland's industry must also, of course, include engineering equipment, machines and precision instruments. Some of the leading firms will have their own stands, on which their latest developments will be demonstrated and exhibited; others will show their internationally renowned products no less impressively by means of large illuminated photographs, for example, large marine diesel engines which sail the seas under the flags of all nations.

The Swiss section of the Sydney Trade Fair could scarcely give the visitor a complete picture of Switzerland's many-sided industrial effort; the exhibits will therefore be supplemented by an enquiry stand, where competent staff will be on duty to answer all questions relating to Swiss production and industry. In particular, they will be able to put enquirers in touch with manufacturers of any of Switzerland's products. No publicity for Switzerland would be complete without a mention of her scenic beauties; the Swiss National Tourist Office will be doing its utmost to give visitors to the Fair a vivid impression of this holiday paradise. Finally, Swissair, whose aircraft provide the only direct link between Switzerland and overseas, will be represented in the Swiss pavilion and will provide information about their services.

By participating officially in the Sydney International Trade Fair from 1st to 12th August 1961, Switzerland will be returning the visit paid by the Australian Government last autumn, when, as Guest of Honour, Australia provided such an admirable display at the Comptoir Suisse in Lausanne.
