banking States, of the fact that the astronauts wore Swiss watches and used a Swiss device for solar wind measuring when they landed on the moon? We may certainly be rightfully proud, but if that is all that makes us Swiss, whether at home or abroad, then we are wrapped up in ourselves and make a very small parcel indeed.

Does it mean we are Swiss if we keep ourselves to ourselves as individuals, just because Switzerland's neutrality has been a safeguard for the country? Federal Councillor Celio at last year's "Rencontres Suisses" in Lausanne emphasised how vital it was to open up towards the world and to burst open the snail's house, so that Switzerland's position in the world, which could once be described as "Neutrality and Solidarity", should deserve the description of "Neutrality and active participation in the Destiny of the World".

Fair enough, we say, for the country as a whole. But where do we come in as individuals? If we believe with Plato that practical work means degradation of culture, then we can sit back once more and enjoy in an abstract way presentation on stage, screen and TV, in beautiful books, in balanced essays and articles, on the concert platform, of everything that happens, be it in politics, science, art or culture. But today, the problem is rather that we run the danger of becoming slaves to technology, of losing humanity as one of the greatest of virtues.

The Viennese neurologist V. E. Frankl said: "Contrary to an animal, no instincts tell man what he has to do. And to the man of today, traditions don't tell either. In fact, he often no longer knows what he wants." "He follows the Joneses, he turns a meek conformist or he does what others want him to do; he is perpetually bewildered and at sea and rebels suddenly out of a feeling of uselessness, of senselessness".

I believe to be a Swiss is to accept humbly and with gratitude the great things that the Switzerland of the past and of the present stands for, and equally the gifts and talents God has given each of us as an individual and to put them to good use. But that means increased responsibility towards my neighbour, my friends, my adversaries; it means shaking my conscience and listening to it; it does not mean acquiring more knowledge or more worldly goods in order to give more to others; it means more humanity as a person, more charity and more love. Each of us stands at a different station in life, but each has a divine timetable and direction to follow — a humble but alert sense of responsibility will make sure that it is the right one.

That means being Swiss, free in the true sense of the word. That is when celebrating the First of August becomes full of meaning again.

MESSAGES DU PRESIDENT DE LA CONFEDERATION aux Suisses de l'Etranger

Chers Compatriotes,

Le 1^{er} août est chaque année le jour du souvenir: il nous remémore un événement politique, la naissance de la Confédération et les origines historiques de notre Patrie. Il unit tous les Suisses, en quelque point du globe terrestre qu'ils se trouvent. Nos compatriotes de l'étranger et leurs familles, tous enfants du même pays, partagent nos sentiments patriotiques; c'est pourquoi nous vivons ce jour en communion de pensée avec eux.

Le Président de la Confédération est heureux de s'adresser à cette occasion à tous nos compatriotes résidant dans des pays étrangers, proches ou lointains. Ceux qui ont encore des liens familiaux en Suisse savent que leurs parents prennent part à leurs succès, à leurs joies ou à leurs soucis. De même, les autorités suisses veulent leur attention, tout au long de l'année, aux problèmes qui préoccupent nos compatriotes de l'étranger. Les heures de fête patriotique ne doivent pas nous les faire oublier. Nous en avons connaissance; souvent aussi il nous révèlent des témoignages émouvants d'attachement à la Suisse.

Je voudrais cependant profiter surtout de ces heures de fête pour adresser mon salut à nos compatriotes de l'étranger et pour les remercier de leur fidélité et de leur activité, qui font honneur à notre pays. J'imagine qu'à l'occasion du 1^{er} août beaucoup d'entre vous se demandent, inconsciemment peut-être, ce que cela représente que d'être Suisse. La question se pose aussi à ceux qui vivent au pays. Mais elle a un sens plus profond pour les Suisses qui résident hors de nos frontières même s'ils sont les hôtes de peuples amis. Nous ne croyons pas être meilleurs que les autres. Néanmoins, si nous considérons l'histoire et la structure de notre pays, le destin que lui a réservé jusqu'ici la providence, la protection qu'elle lui a accordée contre la guerre, la misère et les grandes catastrophes, voilà autant de raisons de nous soucier du sort de ces compatriotes qui restent si fortement liés au pays dont ils sont les enfants et les citoyens, et qui lui gardent cet attachement même en terre étrangère. Nous n'entendons pas vivre à l'écart de la communauté des nations, mais nous ne pourrons maintenir et améliorer la contribution de la Suisse à l'œuvre commune de concorde et de paix que si notre comportement personnel s'inspire réellement des qualités et des vertus qui caractérisent la Suisse: nous devons donc faire preuve de compréhension les uns envers les autres, nous entraider et, où que nous soyons, donner le meilleur de nous-mêmes. Nous pourrons alors, avec quelque fierté, dire avec le célèbre historien Jakob Burckhardt: «La raison d'être d'un petit Etat, c'est de constituer une parcelle de la terre où le plus grand

COMMENT

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE SWISS?

In his annual message to the Swiss living abroad, the President of the Confederation — this year it is Federal Councillor Ludwig von Moos — said that remembering the political birth of Switzerland and its subsequent history tied Swiss at home and abroad together on this day of remembrance. Just as the Swiss outside their homeland, who have relatives at home, share their sorrows and joys, the country's authorities are aware throughout the year of the problems facing the Swiss abroad. Such problems should not be forgotten in this hour of celebration, an opportunity for the President to send greetings and thanks for their loyalty and the honour they achieve for their country. He can well imagine that many a Swiss abroad, just as many a citizen at home, is concerned with the question what it means to be Swiss. The Swiss must not isolate themselves from the community of peoples, but that at home and abroad, we should all put into practice personally what is part of the characteristics of Switzerland: mutual understanding and help, and to do our best wherever we are. Only then may we be proud of what the famous historian Jakob Burckhardt said: "The Small State exists so that there should be one spot in the world where the largest possible quota of nationals are citizens in the full sense of the word". So far the presidential message.

What does it mean to be a Swiss? To be proud of a long history, of staying out of two world wars, of our political system, of being the home of the Red Cross, a haven of refugees, of being near the top in the industrial and nombre possible d'habitants sont des citoyens au plein sens du terme».

Méditons ces paroles en ces heures de fête consacrées à notre chère Patrie; je vous adresse à tous, dans le monde entier, le salut cordial de votre pays.

Rütlischwur

*Wir wollen sein ein einziger Volk von Brüdern,
In keiner Not uns trennen und Gefahr.
Wir wollen frei sein wie die Väter waren,
Eher den Tod, als in Knechtschaft leben.
Wir wollen trauen auf den höchsten Gott
Und uns nicht fürchten vor der Macht der Menschen.*

ASSEMBLY OF SWISS ABROAD

Programme for Montreux

This year's Assembly of the Swiss Abroad will take place at Montreux at the last week-end in August. The theme will be "The Swiss Abroad and Swiss Economy". On Thursday, 28th August, the Working Committee of the Commission of the Swiss Abroad will meet, to be followed the next morning at 8.30 a.m. by the Commission Meeting itself (Parliament of the Swiss Abroad). Another meeting will be that of the Council of the "Foundation for the Swiss Abroad". All these are not open to the public. The general programme will begin in the afternoon. There are four different outings: to "Ateliers de Constructions Mécaniques de Vevey S.A."; to motorway section Puidoux—Chexbres—Villeneuve; to Thermic Power Works Chavalon; to Chillon Castle.

The official opening will take place at the Montreux Palace Hotel, combined with a reception. There will be a general Question Hour of the Secretariat of the Swiss Abroad at 8.30 p.m. At the same time, the Council of the Solidarity Fund will have its meeting (closed).

On Saturday morning, the General Meeting of the Solidarity Fund will take place at 8.30 p.m. An hour later, the first plenary session begins at the Casino Theatre. As in past years, a special lunch will be organised for all those interested in Church questions. In the afternoon, there will be group discussions on re-integration problems of the Swiss abroad and on the possibilities of training of young Swiss from abroad in Swiss undertakings at home. A second plenary session will take place at 4 p.m., followed by a Press Conference.

Banquet, entertainment and dance will begin at 8 p.m. at the Casino.

On Sunday, 31st August, the boat leaves Montreux at 9.15 a.m. for Coppet. There is an ecumenical service at Morges, and lunch will be on the boat. At Coppet Castle, a reception will be followed by a visit to the Museum of the Swiss in Foreign Services. The return journey to Montreux will be made by train, and a last gathering will take place at 5 p.m. at the Palace Hotel at Montreux.

The "Festkarte" which includes the visit on Friday, the banquet on Saturday and the outing on Sunday, will cost 40 francs. Young Swiss from abroad who are between 16 and 23 will receive it free of charge. It is important to write immediately to the Secretariat of the Swiss Abroad, Alpenstrasse 26, 3000 Berne, for application forms (participation and hotel reservation).

It promises to be an excellent meeting in an enchanting part of Switzerland, and it is hoped that a large contingent from Great Britain will make the journey to Montreux. Well worth it!
