IT WAS A Thursday I heard about the film. An ordinary November morning in London—till I got the call. It was Rome, and I'd got the part. That big, plum part I'd lusted after for months.

We opened champagne for breakfast—I wanted tea but it was no time for being humdrum. And later I posed round the Albert Memorial for photographers.

Someone suggested we all went to Paris for dinner.

But Hal had a better idea and took us to the Four Seasons.

Thank heaven for an agent who's got some style.
