PHOTOGRAPHY IN SWITZERLAND FROM 1840 TO THE PRESENT DAY

There was a pioneering flavour about the exhibition "Photography in Switzerland from 1840 to the present day" held at the Polytechnic of Central London in February. This was the first comprehensive inventory of photography in Switzerland from its beginnings to the latest works. More than 1,000 photographs taken by 120 photographers told the history of photography in Switzerland.

The exhibition was not arranged in strict chronological order, although within the single sections the photographs were presented in a certain time sequence. Subjects such as landscapes or portraits, reportages or photographic essays were grouped to give a vivid over-all view. The exhibition was not only the history of a modern means of expression in Switzerland but a personal visual experience of the artist's own visual experience. It was an opportunity to see ourselves and to learn to see because others have looked through the camera for us.

The subjects covered certainly dispelled the myth that Switzerland is only cuckoo clocks, mountains and cheese. Some of the pictures were distressing depicting hunger, wars, natural disasters and civil disturbances — photographic journalism, in fact, telling us about happenings all over the world.

There was also a good collection of historical photographs, some of them giving a good insight into life in Switzerland in days gone by.

The other exhibits included some fine examples of industrial and artistic photography. Altogether a fine show for which we congratulate M. J.-J. Indermuhler, Cultural Counsellor at the Swiss Embassy. W.G.S.

GOOD NEWS

We have some good news for those readers who asked if a book on the rules of Jass could be obtained. The answer, I am glad to say, is yes but, as suspected, only in German.

There is an "official" rule book called Puur Näll As by Gottfried Egg a top expert and president of the Swiss Jass Championships. Mr. Egg's book describes 58 different variations, defining the rules and giving advice on playing technique and tactics.

The 124 page book costs Sw.Fr. 9.50 plus postage and packaging. It should be ordered direct from Puur Näll As, Postfach, 8401 Winterthur.

Our most grateful thanks are due to Mr. W. Künzi of the Swiss Embassy who took a great deal of trouble to obtain this information for us. W.G.S.
