13.8% gross now from GILTS

PLUS capital growth when interest rates fall

GILTS- an excellent opportunity

The capital values of Gilt-Edged Securities usually respond directly to changes in the general level of interest rates. When interest rates rise gilt prices tend to fall but when interest rates fall the price of gilts rises.

Minimum Lending Rate is currently at an all time high of 17% - having risen from only 5% in November 1977. Most gilt experts forecast a fall in interest rates during 1980. When this happens gilt prices should rise - whilst money on deposit will simply attract a lower rate of interest. Schlesingers believe that a professionally managed portfolio of British Government Stocks offers exceptional opportunities for investors seeking high income and potential capital growth over the next three to five years.
