THE 1981 Lucerne International Music Festival, which lasts until September 8, marks the birth centenaries of two major composers - Béla Bartók (1881-1945) and George Enescu (1881-1955).

The leading works of these two musicians, which are being given at various concerts, cover the period from the late romantic to the start of the modern era.

The programme comprises 13 symphony concerts, three chamber concerts, two serenades, a choral concert, two lieder evenings, two pianoforte evenings, four evenings with soloists, two soirées with winners of first prizeonal competitions, two matinées, an evening of organ music, a "Musica antiqua" and a "Musica nova" concert and three evenings of ballet.
