Aber wo wir Kinder des Irrtums und der Täuschung das Letzte zu sehen vermeinten, ist immer noch nicht das Letzte für uns bereitet. Die Einfahrt ins Wallis hinter Goppenstein ist schrundig und öde, eine Landschaft der Hölle in Breughels Manier, ein wahres Tal der Verdammten. Doch nur ein paar kurze Tunnels und Galerien, und schon öffnet sich hinter der Dämmerung der «letzten Welt» und dem Dunkel des Tunnels wie unter einem Glanz, der sich in unzähligen Bienenflügeln bricht, das Tal der Rhone, das Wallis, in dem wir zu neuem irdischem, ach! sehr irdischem Leben erwachen...

EDZARD SCHAPEER

AN ENGLISHMAN LOOKS AT SWITZERLAND

It was a great day when—a long time ago—I was instructed to represent my paper in Switzerland as I had always wished to settle there. I already knew the country and people well and had a special liking for them. I expected to spend a few years here, but circumstances made it that these few years were many and I am looking forward to ending—if possible—my career among the Swiss.

This country is—as I soon discovered—a remarkable look-out post for a newspaperman and a centre where mingle people of every nation. There were those who attended the meetings of the former League of Nations; those who nowadays take part in the varied activities of the United Nations Organization and those who very rightly choose Switzerland as an ideal place for relaxing during their holidays. That explains why Switzerland is an unparalleled centre of worldwide information. Being placed in the heart of continental Europe one can rapidly reach the main headquarters of European political and economical life. While excellent train connexions make journeys easy through the country itself and to the neighbouring regions, air services make it possible to go to London, Paris, Brussels, Vienna, Rome and to return within a single day with an abundant crop of valuable news. Thus can a journalist live in a small country which at first seems to be shut in, and nevertheless remains constantly connected with the outer world and its currents of thought, without losing too much time in going here and there, which is an outstanding advantage for a pressman.

On the other hand, his work is greatly facilitated by an excellent telephone and telegraph system well connected with the outer world. During the past few years the Association de la Presse Etrangère en Suisse—whose President I now happen to be—gained in importance in the eyes of the Swiss authorities and public with the result that foreign journalists were granted many more facilities. May I mention the excursions to which they are often invited in view of visiting some interesting region, factories, electric works, or of seeing typical folkloric plays. The big samples fairs make foreign pressmen acquainted with the newest developments of Swiss trade, industry, agriculture and artistic life and when I add that the Federal and Cantonal authorities and Kurvereine—without forgetting the Swiss National Tourist Office—are doing their utmost for helping and keeping us well informed, one will understand why I say that working in Switzerland is unquestionably a pleasure.

Any foreign journalist who takes part in Swiss life and mixes with the people cannot be one sided: he is bound to be internationally minded. Switzerland is in fact a microcosmos in which live side by side men of various origins, speaking four languages and who feel to a certain extent the influence of French, Italian and German civilization which they adapt to their own way of living and thinking. To these main streams of ideas one has to add the astonishing diversity arising from the Cantons everyone of which has its own character constituted in its turn by the particularities of each valley and district they include. Thus is Switzerland a midget world and that makes it so attractive to foreign observers.

Switzerland is a land of beauty where everyone may find what he likes best: industrial cities, centres of learning, a pleasant countryside, romantic lakes, quiet vales, snowclad mountains. It is not only the beauty and variety of Swiss scenery which appeal to everyone, but also the changing light which in a single day ranges from bright and gay colours to greyish shades according to passing clouds and to the ever changing aspects due to the reflection of silvery waters, to the fanciful colouring of the splendid hills, snows and glaciers.

Switzerland made me an alpinist who did hundreds of climbs often with guides who know how to bring their companions to love their mountains, sometimes by myself and my Swiss alpine experiences are among my happiest memories. I remember standing one early morning on the top of the Mischabel Dom on a wonderfully clear day. The whole of Switzerland lay at my feet and I thought: "How small it looks, but so great nevertheless, and its greatness is due to the influence it has in the world thanks to the culture, love of freedom and peaceful ideal of its hospitable people."

SCHWEIZERISCHES TRACHTEN- UND ALPHIRTFEST IN INTERLAKEN-UNSPUNNEN

3.-5., evtl. 10.-12. September 1955

150 Jahre sind seit dem ersten Unspunnenfest vom Sommer 1805 verflossen. Der diesjährige Anlaß führt uns wieder von Interlaken zu jenem grünen Amphitheater, wo sich einst Bergbevölkerung und Gäste aus aller Welt zusammenfanden.

Die nebenstehende Schilderung und ein Reisebrief der Malerin Vigée-Lebrun mögen etwas von der Atmosphäre vermitteln, welche die alten Hirtenfeste heraufbeschworen hatten. — Mit dem Wintzerfest von Vevey, das eben wiederum in Szene ging, bildeten die Tage zu Unspunnen Höhepunkte im Anfang eines Fremdenverkehrs, der durch die Weckrufe von Rousseau und Haller Anregung fand und an den Seen und in den Tälern der Alpen Naturnähe suchte. Auch dieses Jahr werden in Unspunnen Alphirtenspiele veranstaltet, zwei Festaufführungen finden statt und Volkstänze auf der Höhematte. Ein großer Umzug läßt die schweizerischen Trachten in ihrer Mannigfaltigkeit erleben.

FÊTE ALPESTRE DES COSTUMES ET DES BERGERS SUISSES A INTERLAKEN-UNSPUNNEN

du 3 au 5, év. du 10 au 12 septembre 1955

Il y a 150 ans qu'avait lieu à Unspunnen, la première Fête alpestre. Cet été également, nous monterons d'Interlaken à ce vert amphithéâtre où se réunirent autrefois le peuple des montagnes et des visiteurs venus des quatre coins du monde. La description que nous donnons ci-après provient d'une lettre qu'écrivait alors Madame Vigée-Lebrun. Elle rend toute l'atmosphère de cette fête du temps passé.

Avec la Fête des Vignerons de Vevey, qui a lieu cette année également, les manifestations d'Unspunnen étaient l'apogée d'un tourisme à ses débuts, mais qui se développa grâce aux appels de Rousseau et de Haller. On recherche dès lors à vivre près de la nature en se rendant au bord des lacs et dans les vallées alpestres.

Cet automne, la Fête alpestre d'Unspunnen se composera de jeux, de deux représentations, de danses populaires sur la «Höhematte» et d'un grand cortège de costumes suisses qui défilera en un pittoresque chatoiement d'étoffes et de couleurs.

FESTA SVIZZERA DEI COSTUMI E DEI PASTORI ALPIGIANI A INTERLAKEN-UNSPUNNEN

3-5 settembre, event. 10-12 settembre 1955

Dall'estate del 1805, in cui essa ebbe luogo la prima volta, è la centocinquantesima volta che ricorre la festa di Unspunnen. La ricorrenza di
