Marketing strategy: experiential tourism.

Unpegging the franc from the euro shifted the nature of demand for Switzerland as a destination. To reflect this, ST is building its marketing strategy around emotion- and experience-based selling points for different guest segments.

Swiss leisure and conference tourism cannot produce tourism products as cheaply as its competitors; consequently, its offerings are more expensive than elsewhere in Europe. The Swiss National Bank's decision to abandon the Swiss franc's peg against the euro at the start of 2015, and the resulting volatility and strength of the franc, exacerbated an already difficult economic situation. Furthermore, we are facing a paradigm shift. While city and conference tourism is undergoing a renaissance, this changed demand has forced Alpine and rural tourism to rethink its entire framework, or at least to focus unflinchingly on innovation and quality. In this context, ST has been shifting its marketing strategy, with global efforts selling the emotional appeal of Switzerland to well-defined visitor segments. The guest's discerning taste for authentic experiences is at the crux of this new approach, coupled with the need for Switzerland to be seen as a key player in this sector. With this in mind, ST has also redoubled its social media activities. Making a big splash is our hashtag #INLOVEWITHSWITZERLAND, which users can add to their contributions on an interactive map of the country. The public's stories and photos are reviewed at ST, categorised by theme and location, then presented on the online map in real time.

Switzerland is buzzing: on the website inlovewithswitzerland.com, ST curates photos and stories uploaded by users. This benefits website visitors, who are inspired to discover their own Switzerland and let in on countless insider tips.

Marketing strategy: seamless and all-encompassing.

ST targets its marketing predominantly to the early stages of visitor acquisition, using colourful campaigns, inspiring tips and great experiences to pique the world's interest in Switzerland and promote wanderlust in potential guests. With their appetites whetted, visitors are seamlessly forwarded to the best deals from key tour operators, industry partners and sales partners.

Integrated marketing by ST.

Attention is precious. Winning it, converting it to sales and earning customers' loyalty is ST's core responsibility. The marketing model of ST allows a flexible, market-specific marketing mix.

Sebi & Paul work their magic Popular ambassadors Sebi & Paul returned to do ST another favour by publicising the new Grand Tour of Switzerland. In a TV spot the likeable duo encourage two couples who are exploring Switzerland by car to visit outstanding places which they link up on a map. The duo prove to be the best guides the visitors could have hoped for. Translated into four languages on TV and online, it showcased the Grand Tour to domestic and international audiences, reaching nearly 47.44 million viewers.

E-marketing.

ST is reinforcing its online communications with a comprehensive web presence, robust social media activity across all platforms, and innovative in-house apps. In 2015, ST was delighted to have 2.25 million social media contacts.

virtual tour with real appeal

You don't have to get behind the wheel to experience the Grand Tour of Switzerland; you can have a go in front of your computer. The online route lets users discover selected highlights simply by scrolling with clickable logos for expanded information about a particular place. Image galleries, film clips, 360-degree panoramas and street views appear in the background to provide a complete interactive experience. By the end of 2015, a total of 690,000 users had visited this virtual route on MySwitzerland.com.

Key Media Management (KMM).

One of ST's key functions is keeping in touch with the media by assisting opinion-leaders in their research, launching themed campaigns, and organising press trips and conferences for media professionals.

Media trip case study: facets of Switzerland

This year, ST's key international media trip was held at Lake Geneva. 139 travel journalists from 35 countries accepted a joint invitation from ST and Lake Geneva Region, and enjoyed some of the outstanding attractions along the Grand Tour of Switzerland. They were then divided into smaller groups to experience the diverse regions further east. These included the unique Alpine routes of Graubünden, the Rhone Valley, the urban charms of Bern, Fribourg and St. Gallen, and the castles of the Aarau region. The media coverage generated was worth around CHF 5 million in advertising value.

Key Account Management (KAM).

Given that most long-haul visitors to Switzerland book through a travel agency, ST is in regular touch with key specialists, and devises business plans with some of these agencies to boost their Switzerland coverage, online and offline.

Travel agent case study: promotion for independent travellers from Asia

The aim of this initiative was to attract independent travellers from long-haul markets who typically stay longer than average in the country. Thanks to a promotions and training programme, ST succeeded in getting over 10,000 travel agencies to persuade their customers to book trips to Switzerland of at least four days. As an agent incentive, a special loyalty programme was offered by GTA, the largest Asian supplier for independent travel. ST assessed that this initiative netted an extra 20,000 hotel nights booked.

The champion sellers of independent Swiss tours in 2015: ST invited the ten most successful Asian travel agencies to Thun to collect their awards and celebrate with representatives of ST and the industry.
