(10) «An alchemical symbol of a union of unlike substances; a marrying of the opposites in an intercourse which has as its fruition the birth of a new element. This is symbolised by a child that manifests potential for greater wholeness by recombining attributes of both the opposing natures. From Jung's point of view, the coniunctio was identified as the central idea of alchemical process. He himself saw it as an archetype of psychic functioning, symbolising a pattern of relationships between two or more UNCONSCIOUS factors.» «Coniunctio» defined in: Andrew Samuels, Bani Shorter and Fred Plaut, A Critical Dictionary of Jungian Analysis, London 1986, p. 35.

«Around the hearth the first groups assembled; around it the first alliances formed; around it the first rude religious concepts were put into the customs of a cult. Throughout all phases of society the hearth formed that sacred focus around which the whole took order and shape». Gottfried Semper: The Four Elements of Architecture and Other Writings, trans. - (1) (2) (3) Interfaces simultaneously connect and separate: «[...] the interface is a form of relation that obtains between two or more distinct entities, conditions, or states such that it only comes into being as these distinct entities enter into an active relation with one another; such that it actively maintains, polices, and draws on the separation that renders these entities as distinct at the same time as it selectively allows a transmission or communication of force or information from one entity to the other; and such that its overall activity brings about the production of a unified condition or system that is mutually defined through the regulated and specified interrelations of these distinct entities». Branden Hookway, Interface, Cambridge, MA 2014, p. 4.
Uploading or streaming videos of yourself eating is more broadly known as «Mukbang», literally translating into «eating show». In Korean culture, this corresponds to a growing population of solo-diners, a break from the tradition of eating as a group. During the pandemic, Morgan Ome reflects: «I began seeing myself mirrored on my For You page, which served up videos of other people eating alone. In the videos, creators talked to their presumed audiences in animated voices: ‘I’m so proud of you for eating today [...]’. But this is not mindless entertainment: Many of these videos are designed to encourage viewers, especially those with eating disorders or mental-health diagnoses, to eat in tandem with the creator». <https://www.theatlantic.com/ideas/archive/2022/06/secret-to-eating-alone-eat-with-me-tiktok/661249/> (accessed 29 July 2022).

- THE WHOLE CITY TREMBLES, THE WHOLE CITY IS ON FIRE
Ludovica Battista
(1) Quoted in Kevin Salatino, Incendiary Art: The Representation of Fireworks in Early Modern Europe, Los Angeles 1997, p. 78.
(2) Feast is here preferred to the terms «festival» or «festivity» for the ritualistic cultural connotations of the night of December, 31st in Italy, which include long Pantagruelian meals. Fireworks can be regarded as a sort of connection point between the ostensibly rich private dinner tables of the inhabitants and the exterior: their shared territory.

- (3) According to Gordon, «haunting is an animated state in which a repressed or unresolved social violence is making itself known, sometimes very directly, sometimes more obliquely.» See Avery Gordon, Ghostly Matters, Minneapolis 1997, p. 16.
- (4) This was the gargantuan festival in Green Park on the occasion of the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, for which George II commissioned Händel to write the famous suite Music for the Royal Fireworks and the Bolognese Ruggieri to design the pyrotechnics; it was a resounding failure, in truth, due to the bad weather, and there were even two casualties among the thousands of people who came.

- (12) Writes Furio Jesi «the city really felt as one's own city: one's own because it belongs to the I but at the same time to the 'others'; one's own because it is a battlefield that one has chosen and the collectivity too has chosen». See Furio Jesi, The Suspension of Historical Time, dOCUMENTA (13): 100 Notes, 100 Thoughts 69, Ostfildern 2012.
- (13) Rite described by the anthropologist Franz Boas and observed in the Kwakiutl population, in which individuals of the same social status distribute or compete to destroy valuable goods in order to publicly affirm their rank or to regain it if they have lost it. It later became a ritual paradigm of waste.

- (5) Cristina Diaz Moreno & Efren G. Grinda, Third natures : a micropedia, London 2014, p. 124.
- (6) Three natures are categorized as follows: the first is wilderness, the undomesticated wild that was common in the age of hunter-gatherers; the second is composed of productive landscapes such as farmland, dams, aqueducts, roads, among many Neolithic inventions; and the third consists of gardens, pleasurable places where art and thought are brought to bear on nature. Landscape historian John Dixon Hunt outlines this schematic evolution from the age of hunter-gatherers to the Neolithic revolution to the age of great civilizations. One can follow such a progressive route at the Villa Lante near Viterbo starting at the wild park and then moving down the cascade to culminate in the sixteenth-century present, the ornamental fountains and the iconography of the Cardinal who commissioned the layout. In 1541, Jacopo Bonfadio among others, coined «una terza natura», as nature improved by art. See John Dixon Hunt, Greater Perfections: The Practice of Garden Theory, Philadelphia 2000.
- (7) Eduardo Zavattari, one of the most authoritative proponents of Italian racism, expressed an argument in an article on «Natural environment and racial characteristics», published in the Fascist journal «La Difesa della Razza» (Defending the Race) that became much of the environmental mythology at the base of Italian Fascism. According to Zavattari, the Italian landscape impressed its quality on the Italian race, producing «the pure Italian, steely and sturdy as the mountains, obstinate brave as peaks rising to the sky». Fascism built a narrative in which the racial quality of people was embedded in the national landscape considered as a by-product of both natural and historical. See the anthology *Eia, eia alalà. - (13) Madison Grant was a lawyer and wildlife conservationist who advocated for eugenics policies in the US during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Grant saw eugenics and conservation as inherently compatible movements. With Franklin D. Roosevelt's support, Grant helped found the New York Zoological Society in 1895 and the Bronx Zoo in 1899 to promote wildlife conservation and the study of animals. In the first two decades of the twentieth century, Grant helped found numerous conservation organizations and parks, such as the Save-the-Redwoods League and Denali National Park in Alaska. In his book, The Passing of the Great Race; or, The Racial Basis of European History, New York City 1916, Grant argued that what he called the Nordic race was biologically and culturally superior to all other people. Adolf Hitler referred to Grant's book as his Bible and it was listed during the Nuremberg Trials in the late 1940s as evidence that eugenics did not solely originate in Germany.

- (20) Jacques Lacan and Jacques-Alain Miller, Anxiety. The Seminar of Jacques Lacan: Book X, Cambridge 2014.
- (21) This can be further illustrated by Lacan's development of Freud's allegory of Oedipus, the Theban hero of Greek mythology, who he sees himself looking back at himself after he has fulfilled the desire of the other (his double ego): killing his father and sleeping with his mother. He is able to look at the other – his ego as that which has these grotesque desires – because in his punishment of his crimes his eyes were plucked out and placed on the floor pointed back at him. This is the moment of anxiety for Oedipus, where the fantasy that was at work to shape the subject is revealed, this is the symbolic death of the subject. Ultimately the Oedipus complex is the symbolic structure that organizes our social-symbolic and the unconscious (of social meanings). See Jacques Lacan and Jacques-Alain Miller, Anxiety. The Seminar of Jacques Lacan: Book X, Cambridge 2014, p. 332.

- (13) «Indem die Sage den Auftritt der Sphinx dem Mord am Vater unmittelbar folgen lässt, stellt sie eine kausale Verbindung her: weil du den Vater getötet hast, erscheint das Tier. Wir wissen, es war nicht Totschlag, es war Raubmord. [...] Ödipus hat den Vater entmann – die ältere Version der Sage spricht es aus: er hat sein ‹Pferd› gestohlen, er hat ihm seinen ‹Gürtel›, sein ‹Schwert› abgenommen. Dann hat er die Mutter verraten, hat sie geopfert, um sich zu retten, und, als er sich vor Strafe dennoch nicht sicher fühlen konnte, beide ermordet.» Judith Le Soldat, Raubmord und Verrat, Stuttgart 2020, S. 401.

- (15) «Das unbewusste Schuldgefühl forderte, für das ihm Geraubte müsse ihm etwas Gleichwertiges zurückgestattet, die Tat durch eine selbstaufgelegte Strafe, ein Opfer gesühnt werden. Die Chiffren: Hand, Fuss, der Stein [...], sind teils gängige Symbole, [...] für den Phallus.» Le Soldat, Raubmord und Verrat (wie Anm. 13), S. 269.
- (16) Wie bereits Freud (Le Soldat, Raubmord und Verrat (wie Anm. 13), S. 395): «Ödipus' Antwort ist rasch und eindeutig: er bereut und kapituliert; denn er gibt dem Greis seinen dritten Fuss zurück. Der Mann hat nur noch zwei Beine; der Alte aber hat wieder den ‹dritten Fuss›. Dagegen revoltiert der Träumer. Er will keinen ‹pous› zurückgeben.»

- (5) Although the site attains a hybrid form and operates on diverse layers, for ease of reference the denotation «camp» applies here to the whole complex, both in terms of its differentiated functions and operations, as well as in terms of its spatial configuration within the official site of the Moria camp and its periphery. Additionally, following Mezzandra and Neilson, the nomenclature of the «migrant» is used to denote «subjects who cross or negotiate the world's borderscapes», and includes all subjects regardless of their statutory or discursive categorization as asylum seeker, refugee, immigrant or otherwise – categorisations that are overwhelmingly translated, as Ticktin notes, as «primarily a moral, not a legal, distinction that purports to separate the innocent from the guilty, the deserving from the undeserving.» Sandro Mezzadra and Brett Neilson, Border as Method, or, the Multiplication of Labor, Social Text Books.
